Japan, Fearless, Defiant. Ploughing With Convicts. How Rich Are We? Not Very. Latest Dillinger News.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ADMIRABLE ARE the courage and resourcefulness of Japan, defying desperately bad conditions at home, laying down new international law for the whole western world as regards dealings with China. Reaching out, everywhere, for foreign trade. Establishing diplomatic missions in every little central and southeastern country in Europe.

Japan is driving British trade from Turkey, offering the Turks long time credits and prices with which no European nation can compete.

YOU REALIZE where this nation would be without protective tariffs when you talk with Mr. Chapin, of Detroit, recently Secretary of Commerce. Japan sends in tennis shoes of good quality to be retailed here at ten cents a pair, and well made bicycles to sell at three dollars and twenty-five cents.

BRITAIN'S PREMIER MACDONALD is said to be "much vexed" by Japan's assumption of a dictatorship in Asia. There are only seventy million Japanese, as against Britain's three hundred million assorted Asiatics in India. But Japan's 70,000,000 will fight for Japan to the last man, whereas Britain's 300,000,000 would not fight for Britain at all.

IT IS TO BE hoped, for Japan's sake, that she will not overlook the fact that war has changed, explosives and poison gas kill the brave as easily as they kill the timid. The next war will be an air war, and Japan, a nation of inflammable, closely-crowded houses, is open to destructive attack by fire bombs. Also, Japan has never been through a real war. Beating disorganized China, or beating Russia under the Czars, means nothing.

THE COUNTRY is shocked, mildly, to learn that, for the lack of mules, at Arkansas Tucker Prison Farm, convicts are hitched in the traces, and made to pull cotton planting machines.

Six convicts are hitched to each cotton planter, with a seventh man guiding the machine. The sharp steel teeth dig only two or three inches into the soft soil. Four men could do the work easily; two could do it, if they really worked.

MANY AN old woman in Europe and Asia would laugh at the "terrible hardship" inflicted on the poor convicts. Thousands of such women pull plows, one woman harnessed up with one donkey or one cow, doing her share, the traces arranged to make her task not quite half.

Reclus, in his "Man and the Earth," shows your primitive ancestor perched in the tree, bow and spear in hand, watching for the enemy, while his two old wives pull the wooden plough below him, his youngest wife guiding the plough. There could be no healthier exercise than ploughing, in reason. It compels very deep breathing, rids the lungs of residual air, and might help reconcile the young convict to honest work, later.

HOW RICH is the United States? How rich are its people? You cannot answer the former question. Based on national income, in good times, you might reply, "as of today," that the U. S. A. is worth about one trillion eight hundred billion. But that is misleading. Alaska, alone, is worth more, so are several of the states, and the oil still unused is worth much more.

IF YOU FIGURE wealth by individual savings, we are very poor. The country's total savings amount to only fifty thousand million dollars, barely four hundred dollars per capita.

It is a comfort to know that Americans have fifteen per cent of their accumulations invested in homes, as against eleven nine-tenths per cent ten years ago.

BUT THAT showing is pitiful. A healthy Negro slave, before the war was worth one thousand dollars, and the average white is "worth" now less than five hundred dollars.

The average old American, dying penniless, dependent on others, finds satisfaction, perhaps, in thinking how much he has spent. And that may be the important thing. Since spending keeps business and industry going.

The French do not think so. Every old Frenchman thinks himself disgraced if he has failed to make himself at least modestly independent after a lifetime of work.

THE LATEST concerning Bandit Dillinger credits him with robbing a bank, getting $29,000 and disappearing, as usual, with two friends. His father admits that during the wild hunt for his son, Dillinger came home to spend a quiet evening with relatives and neighbors. And Dillinger is lame. But for that, according to reporters, he might kidnap the Attorney General.

Fabulous stories surround him, as they did Robin Hood. Dillinger may come to believe what he reads about himself, and get caught.

CRIME AND BOOTLEGGING continue, as was to be expected. In prohibition days, bootlegging involved only contempt for law and Constitution. That was not so serious. But now it means cutting down government revenue, and that is serious.

One thousand federal agents will be turned loose against the bootleggers, but one thousand will not be enough. There are tens of thousands of moonshiners, well hidden, approved or feared in their communities.

NRA may prove that supply

BANKER ILL, HIS ARREST HELD UP

Jail Doctor Rules Trust Officer 'Too Sick' To Move

While county detectives guarded W. P. Ortale, president of the Bank of America Trust Company, charged with embezzling $106,700, state bank examiners speeded their investigation of the restricted bank's records.

Ortale, charged with the embezzlement in an information sworn by W. E. Palmer, Jr., one of the bank examiners, was not informed of the charges when Dr. C. J. Ellis, county jail physician, after an examination at the Mt. Lebanon home of Ortale's mother, pronounced him too ill to arrest. Ortale is suffering from bronchitis and influenza, said Dr. Ellis, who went to the Ortale home with Assistant Chief of County Detectives James S. McGinley and Constable Peter Lee.

FOUR COUNTS IN CHARGE

Ortale is charged with four counts of embezzlement in the information sworn to before Alderman A. M. Maloney. He is accused of having misappropriated $2,500 on November 17, 1933; $1,900 on November 18; $2,500 on November 20 and $100,000 on or about April 1, 1934. His bond has been set at $50,000.

The bank was placed on a restricted basis by Dr. William D. Gordon yesterday morning. At the same time Dr. Gordon announced:

"All deposits under $2,500 are guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the directors have agreed to guarantee all deposits in excess of that amount."

PLANNING REORGANIZATION

According to Dr. Gordon, who said that "not a single depositor will lose one penny," arrangements are already being considered for the reorganization of the bank.

Decision to place the bank on a restricted basis was reached at a meeting Thursday night at which the directors of the bank, Dr. Gordon and his staff, representatives of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were in attendance.

'Bold Kidnaper' Helped at Bath, Actress Admits

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, April 21.—Bedroom and bath occupied the center of a legal spotlight today in the preliminary hearing of R. C. Dowling, handsome young Hollywood actor, charged with kidnaping Marjorie Crawford, pretty actress-aviatrix, with matrimonial intent.

A hush fell on the crowded courtroom as the wealthy Miss Crawford, formerly the wife of William Wellman, film director, answered questions pertaining to incidents at Yuma, Ariz., where she said Dowling at pistol's point had forced her to accompany him.

Asked Defense Attorney Le Roy Herbert:

"Now, Miss Crawford, didn't you take a bath while you were in Yuma?"

"Well, yes."

"Why didn't you lock the bathroom door?"

"I was afraid to do so."

"Now, didn't Mr. Dowling assist you when you disrobed for your bath?"

"Yes; that is—er—he helped me off with my skirt and blouse."

Miss Crawford said she made no attempt to escape from Dowling on the automobile trip to Yuma for fear he would shoot her.

The state rested its case.

Dowling denied he kidnaped Miss Crawford. He said he loved her and still wanted to marry her.

WOMAN SEIZED IN KIDNAPING

ST. PAUL, April 21.—(AP.)—Indicted on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II, of Denver, Mrs. Alvina Ruth Kohler, a sister-in-law of Verne Sankey, who hanged himself in a South Dakota jail, was arrested in St. Paul last night and held pending arrangements for her removal to Sioux Falls, S. D.

Mrs. Kohler, a sister of Fern May Sankey, wife of the outlaw, indicted on the same charge, was indicted by the District Court in South Dakota March 24, last, Werner Hanni, head of the district office of the Department of Justice here, said.

According to a copy of the complaint received by George F. Sullivan, United States District Attorney, Mrs. Kohler, together with Verne Sankey, Carl W. Pearce, Fern May Sankey, alias Mrs. Verne Sankey, and Arthur Youngberg, conspired between June 22, 1932, and April 1, 1933, to kidnap Charles Boettcher II and hold him for $60,000 ransom.

Boettcher was seized February 12, 1933, and released after payment of the ransom.

'Key Men' Accused of Secret Plotting in 'Little Red House'

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Charges that a group of 10 or 12 young men holding key postions in the administration are meeting nightly in a "little red house in Georgetown" to foist "Communistic legislation" on America were made yesterday by Representative Britten (Rep.), of Illinois.

At the same time Britten demanded the recall of British Consul General Gerald Campbell, from New York City.

Campbell's recent action in speaking against the Vinson big Navy bill before the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom prompted the demand.

In referring to the young college boy advisers, Britten said that although they are not cabinet officers, they "shape the elements in the legislation that we refer to as radical or Communistic."

Deprecating the rapid spread of Communism into even our colleges and the Navy, Britten declared:

"This little red house down in Georgetown is occupied by Mr. Cohen, Mr. Corcoran and Mr. Guthrie, and almost every night men like Ferdinand Pecora, Frederick C. Howe and James MacCauley Landis and the men who wrote the Fletcher-Rayburn bill meet there.

"It is the little red house in Georgetown where every night of the week young men of Communistic mind meet, so-called young students. They call them Felix Frankfurter's Hot Dogs."

He added:

"This house is going to become as famous as the green house on K street became durthe Harding administration."

Body of Mt. Lebanon Suicide Recovered

The body of Irvine N. King, steel salesman, of 220 LeMoyne avenue, Mt. Lebanon, who leaped to his death from the Sewickley Bridge last Monday, was recovered from the Ohio River at the foot of Walnut street today.

The Coroner said $142 in cash and a paycheck for $124 were found in King's clothing. He had suffered from a nervous collapse. Witnesses saw him drive his car on to the bridge, abandon it and leap into the river.

Abetting Communism

GREAT SURPRISE is felt throughout the country that Congress takes no notice of the spread and increasing boldness of Communist propaganda in our midst.

The exposure of these sinister activities, made by the Hearst papers recently, should have resolved any doubts the most skeptical entertained as to the reality of this menace. For nearly two weeks these articles appeared daily. They were packed with facts, names, dates, literal quotation from circulars and letters—all of which had been carefully verified before publication.

The articles produced a profound impression throughout the country, reflected in letters from readers, editorial comments and otherwise.

WE CALLED upon Congress to launch a systematic investigation, and to do it without delay. We reminded Congress that publicity is the great safeguard of the people against a furtive and secret danger of this type, and stated—what everybody knows and concedes—that an investigation, backed by adequate power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence, is the first step in curbing activities so destructive and vicious.

There are numerous journals circulating freely, without regulation or supervision, which are openly seditious in character and purpose. Most of them are subsidized from mysterious and alien centers of enmity to the United States.

BUT PERHAPS more dangerous and subtle is the Communistic propaganda which is being carried on in our schools.

As we said in an editorial appearing in these columns recently:

"Large sections of the youth of America, instead of being instructed truthfully in the history and aims of their country, are taught to hate their country, to foment disorder, to pray for the overthrow of the government and to apply in their lives and contacts, as they grow to maturity and take their place as citizens, the technique of revolution imported into this country from lands where Communism has accomplished its purpose of overthrowing all existing authority."

Added point was given to this warning last Saturday in a speech made in Detroit by former Justice George N. Clark, of the Michigan Supreme Court. HE DECLARED THAT NINETY PER CENT OF THE PROFESSORS IN THE UNITED STATES ARE TEACHING COMMUNISM TO THEIR PUPILS.

THIS IS appalling! It cannot be ignored!

The training of American youth cannot be entrusted to professorial crack-pots of this type. They are veritable disease germs. They must be rooted out.

Is it possible that Congress is insensible to a danger, so abundantly shown, and to its duty in the premises?

When a duty of so high and imperative a character clamors for performance, are we to be regaled with asinine performances like the Bulwinkle investigation of Prof. Wirt—a transparent piece of cheap politics designed to discredit an American citizen who had merely put his finger on one of the ADMINISTRATION'S WEAK SPOTS and stated, SIMPLY AND MODESTLY, a fact which high administration officials have been for months proclaiming INSOLENTLY AND DEFIANTLY?

LET CONGRESS realize that in this investigation it made a monkey of itself—not of Dr. Wirt, as it intended.

Let it be content to exercise its constitutional powers by SERVING THE PEOPLE and NOT BY OPPRESSING THEM.

And one of its prime duties—immediate and pressing—is to investigate to the core this vicious Communist propaganda, which greets one at every turn and in every variety of artful guise!

SEIM OUSTED BY COURT RULING

Long Legal Contest Over 25 Votes Won By Republican

James H. Rose, Republican, today was declared legally elected Burgess of Braddock in an opinion handed down by Judge Frank P. Patterson in Quarter Sessions Court.

Judge Patterson ordered that a certificate of election issued to Fred Seim, Democrat, be revoked.

The ruling follows a long legal battle in which Rose contested Seim's apparent victory at the polls last November.

In declaring Rose the winner, Judge Patterson directed that 25 votes cast for James Rose on the ballots be credited to James H. Rose.

Rose's attorneys had contended during the contest that there was no James Rose in the borough other than James H. Rose. Efforts of the other side to show that a Negro named James Rose had lived at 514 Center street, Braddock, exploded when photographs introduced in court showed this address to be a vacant lot.

With the 25 votes credited by the court to Rose today his total is 2,122 and Seim's total 2,117.

VOTE ON M'LEOD BILL NEARS

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Supporters of the McLeod bill to pay depositors in closed national banks in full, were virtually assured the measure will be brought to a vote in the House Monday.

Speaker Rainey ruled illegal the action of the Banking and Currency Committee in reporting out a "dummy" substitute bill.

Representative Steagell (Dem.), of Alabama, committee chairman, admitted his group had approved the substitute—designed to give the death blow to the McLeod measure—during a sitting of the chamber and without its permission.

Pointing out committees may not act during the House session without special permission, Rainey nullified the proceedings.

Steagall will call his group together today to report out again the dummy substitute.

However, Representatives McLeod, author of the bill, and Walcott, both Michigan Republicans—expect to bring on a test of strength in the House Monday.

The petition for discharge of the committee and immediate floor action will be brought up Monday.

If the committee reports out the dummy bill today, Steagall is expected to attempt to block action on the petition on a point of order, contending the bill in substitute form already has been indorsed and brought out.

Should Speaker Rainey sustain this contention, McLeod or Walcott will appeal from the chair's ruling to the House, thus bringing the controversy—and indirectly the bill—to a vote on the floor.

Tammany Takes Scalp of Chief Curry

JoJb-Starved Tiger Of New York Ousts 'Man of Blunders'

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP.)—John F. Curry's opposition to men who win elections has cost him the leadership of Tammany Hall.

The silvery-haired chief, dubbed by his opponents "The Man of Blunders," was removed by the executive committee last night.

It was the most drastic action ever taken against a Wigwam leader in the 135 years of the Hall's existence, although threats of similar action against leaders in the past have resulted in resignations.

William P. Kenneally, chairman of the committee, will call a meeting next week to select Curry's successor, which, however, will not be an individual but a steering committee.

Curry's opponents charged that through a series of political blunders he had lost patronage, the cardinal sin of a political leader, until the Tammany Tiger had become a very lean animal indeed.

At Chicago, Curry opposed the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt and supported the candidacy of Al Smith. That cost the Hall plenty when Jim Farley began handing out federal patronage.

Curry opposed the nomination of Herbert H. Lehman for Governor and the election of Lehman didn't help the Hall when state patronage was distributed.

The leader had stood by Jimmy Walker, New York's Mayor to the end of Walker's political career. It did not add to Curry's prestige when Jimmy resigned during an investigation and left the country.

Political Dud Backer Goes Down Fighting, Refused to Quit

The last blow, however, and by far the worst, was his failure to secure re-election for Mayor John P. O'Brien. The Fusion victory by a margin that would have been considered good, even for a Democrat, cooked his political goose.

Until the vote was taken by the Wigwam executive committee, Curry had maintained that he would win. He was offered the alternative of resigning or having a vote taken on his ouster. He chose to fight—and he lost.

SCHNADER 'ON SPOT' AS EX-AIDE RENEWS SURETY CHARGES

GRUBBS INSISTS ON AUDIT ROW AIRING

Demands Former Chief Bares Letters in Case Of Defunct Firm

Attorney General William A. Schnader was on the spot today, faced with the demand of a former special state insurance counsel that he produce correspondence over affairs of the defunct Pennsylvania Surety Corporation.

A suit to recover $5,000,000 from former directors of the surety corporation has been filed by the State Insurance Department. In it the directors are charged with negligent and reckless administration.

And the former insurance counsel, W. Clyde Grubbs, of this city, claims that Schnader, candidate for Republican nomination for Governor, in 1931 blocked his fight for an independent audit of the corporation.

GRUBBS REPLIES

In Harrisburg, Schnader was quoted yesterday as saying that the Insurance Commissioner and a bondholders' committee concurred in his disapproval of an independent audit. Grubbs replied:

"My answer to Schnader is—let him make public the files of our correspondence on the case."

After working on the case five months in 1931, Grubbs said he had uncovered dealings seeming to justify a suit. These, he said, he had discussed in correspondence with Schnader.

It was absurd to bring suit with such a large sum involved, Grubbs claimed, without an audit. When it was refused, he said, he resigned.

Schnader's reason for refusal, according to Grubbs, was that an audit was too expensive.

19 NAMED IN SUIT

The Attorney General was quoted yesterday as stating he suggested that suit be filed and an audit postponed until the directors had presented their answer.

The suit now pending involves 19 prominent citizens of the Pittsburgh district, who were former directors of the corporation.

It alleges a history of devious and high-powered financial sleight-of hand in a money game, operations of which reached from Baltimore to Chicago.

The net result of the complicated manipulations is alleged to be loss of $5,000,000 to creditors of the Pennsylvania Surety Corporation. The huge sum vanished, nobody seems to know where.

Letter Baring Insurance Investigations Revealed

HARRISBURG, April 21.—(AP.)—A letter purported to have been written by Charles F. Armstrong while he was insurance commissioner, in which he said that certain companies were examined before mergers were approved, was given to a Legislative investigating committee yesterday by Herbert L. Cohen, state representative from York County.

Employes of the Insurance Department previously testified examinations were not made before the mergers. The merged companies subsequently failed. Armstrong died several weeks ago.

The letter, addressed to "Taylor and Murray, Lancaster," was dated July 6, 1932.

Armstrong was alive, but in ill health when members of his department told the committee examinations had not been made prior to consolidations.

One paragraph of the letter said:

"Throughout the course of these mergers, each constituent company was the subject of an examination by the Insurance Department. The examinations were made as a necessary part of approval by the department of the respective mergers."

Many Favorable to Cab Competition

The City Law Department today revealed that it has received scores of letters from Pittsburghers demanding competitive cab service here.

The letters came as a result of a new attempt of a company to operate a taxicab service here in which it intends placing 300 lightweight cabs in the streets at lower rates than are now being charged by the Parmelee Company.

The new company is to be known as the Zone Cab Corporation of Pennsylvania. Application for permission to operate the cabs will be made in Harrisburg next week.

WAGNER BILL HOPES MOUNT

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—Two controversial measures, the unemployment insurance and Wagner labor bills, were reviewed at a White House conference yesterday and predictions were made afterwards that both had a good chance for passage at this session.

Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York, author of the labor proposal which would outlaw company-dominated unions, said he had some modifications in mind and that the bill might take its place on the administration calendar after these were made.

Secretary Perkins spoke confidently of Congressional approval for the unemployment insurance measure, which would levy a federal tax on payrolls to take care of men thrown out of work.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief director, also attended the discussion of the bills with the President. Congressional leaders, however, said that both measures would have to sprint if they are not to be stranded by adjournment.

SILVER PARLEY AT WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—The Senate silver bloc, split within itself, sent a half dozen of its members to the White House today to obtain presidential agreement for some sort of silver legislation at this session.

Indications coming from the executive offices before the conference hour, however, held out little encouragement.

Mr. Roosevelt was represented as feeling that international rather than purely domestic action held the answer to the silver remonetization problem.

The Chief Executive was said to believe the formula presented at the London Economic Conference, under which nations would fix definite reserves of silver in relation to their gold supply, presented one possible solution.

LOAN BILL GETS ROOSEVELT O. K.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—A "go ahead" signal from President Roosevelt has virtually assured early Congressional action on the Glass bill to establish a huge fund in the Federal Reserve System for five-year loans to industry.

The Chief Executive gave his support to the plan yesterday in a conference with Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, author of the legislation, and Eugene Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Chairman Fletcher was expected to call the Senate Banking Committee together within a day or two to act on the bill and consider a more liberal plan proposed by Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Members of the committee predicted speedy approval of the Glass legislation.

Borough Official Faces Court Trial

Burgess Richard Lawry, also a Justice of Peace, of West Homestead, was held for court on $1,000 bail, by Justice of Peace Thomas F. Johnson, of Munhall, last night, on charges of aggravated assault and battery. Charges were preferred by David Webber, of 713 Seventh avenue, West Homestead, who alleged that Lawry beat him last Saturday night at a dance in the Homestead Rumanian Hall.

and demand no longer count in business and industry, but they still rule in bootlegging and moonshining. As long as you can make "white mule" corn whisky for fifteen cents a gallon and sell it for a dollar a bottle, there will be moonshiners, unless Americans suddenly acquire respect for law. One able southern banker, his state still dry, remarked:

"For myself, I prefer prohibition with good corn liquor at two dollars a gallon against poor government whisky at three dollars a bottle."

A distinguished southern publisher, to whom excellent French brandy was offered, asked:

"Haven't you any corn liquor? That French stuff will burn your insides out."

The South really believes in corn liquor, and many survive its use, surprisingly.

Cabinet Avoids Stand On U. S. Price-Fixing

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt has been advised directly by a special cabinet committee that the creation of a policy of price-fixing is not yet feasible.

This conclusion was rested on the White House desk by Secretaries Perkins, Roper, Wallace and Attorney General Cummings, despite demands of price-fixing's friends and foes that a policy be enunciated.

The report, still withheld from publication, was authoritatively described as recommending that positive steps be taken to get information which would make an objective judgment possible.

The report is short. It makes no attempt to decide the merits of questions as to whether prices have risen too far under NRA price control provisions in codes or whether such provisions have been conducive to monopoly.

The document was said authoritatively to state that many factors besides prices, or the misuse of price control methods, may have brought harmful results. Thus it was said that a specific determination of the part prices have played is at present impossible.

The report carried importance because of its possible effect on the President's attitude toward prices.

If the advice is accepted, it was said, a continuation of the experimental attitude toward the question may be expected at least until completion of a more thorough inquiry.

RIVALS ASSAIL SCHNADER'S CANDIDACY

Called Bosses' Fiddler; Shannon Confers With Aides

Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon, in Pittsburgh today to confer with his political lieutenants in western counties, took an indirect shot at Attorney General William A. Schnader when he said:

"I stand precisely where I have always stood, free of political labels and controlled by no self-seeking faction. The Republican Party cannot win with a candidate selected by politicians."

Schnader has been indorsed by the Mellon-Vare-Grundy alliance as a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination against Shannon and the remainder of the field.

Charles G. Margiotti, a third candidate, made direct reference to the organization combination in a radio speech, when he said:

"Everyone knows that the man who pays the fiddler has the right to call the tune. The candidates elected by the Mellon-Grundy-Vare organization is the fiddler, backed by the Mellon and Grundy millions and what is left of the Vare political machine."

Shannon conducted a reception this afternoon in temporary headquarters in the William Penn Hotel, and later with other candidates attended a tea of the Women's Republican Club of Western Pennsylvania.

Congressman Twing Brooks, of the Thirtieth District, opened his campaign for re-election last night in his North Side headquarters.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—(AP.)—A seven-point program for maintainance and extension of the state public school system was described last night by Attorney General William A. Schnader, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

In the campaign address he also made a plea for harmony within the ranks of the Republican party. He said:

"I feel confident of the Republican nomination and election."

Senator Reed Insists He's Not Part of Any Slate

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—(AP.)—Senator David A. Reed says his friends are his friends, regardless of whom they back for Governor, because in his campaign for renomination on the Republican ticket he "absolutely refuses to be a part of any slate."

The Senator said yesterday that Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon, Judge Marion D. Patterson and Thomas W. Phillips would share the support of his friends.

Democrats See Truce After Primary Battle

ALLENTOWN, Pa., April 21.—(AP.)—Union of opposing factions of Pennsylvania Democrats after the May primaries is predicted by warring party leaders.

Before 500 Democrats at a Jefferson Day dinner last night, opposing candidates for state offices echoed this keynote:

Sorority Elects New Officers

These new officers have been elected by the Lambda Theta Sigma sorority: Eve Kress, president; Esther Solomon, vice president; Doris Wein, secretary; Lena Saltsburg, treasurer; Bell Fox, social chairman, and Frances Gorin, publicity reporter.

M'NAIR FIGHTS COERCION OF PAYROLL

Political Whip Banned In New Edict to Safety Head

Reports to Mayor McNair that various city employes are being ordered to attend political meetings and support certain candidates under threat of dismissal have resulted in the Mayor's issuing a new edict against coercion of city payrollers.

The Mayor also reiterated his demand that city officeholders give up their positions in their political parties.

In a letter to Director of Public Safety Ralph E. Smith, the Mayor said:

"Following the policy recently laid down by our President that all party officials, if in the employ of the federal government, should refrain from political activities, I desire to state that the policy of the administration in the City of Pittsburgh will be the same as that laid down by President Roosevelt.

"I made an announcement shortly after my inauguration that policemen, firemen and other city employes were not to be coerced in any manner towards the support of any candidate, nor were any party officials to remain on the payroll unless they had given up their position in their political party.

"Word has come to me that this announcement is being disregarded and that various city employes are being ordered to attend political meetings and support certain candidates under threat of dismissal.

"This is contrary to the policy laid down by the administration, and if any city employe will report to me such occurrence I will be glad to investigate and assure him that such action is without my authority and can be totally disregarded.

"I would also state that our rule as to political contribution was the same as the federal government's—that no city employe is permitted to ask political contributions from another."

BOROUGH 'FUSS' BECKONS MAYOR

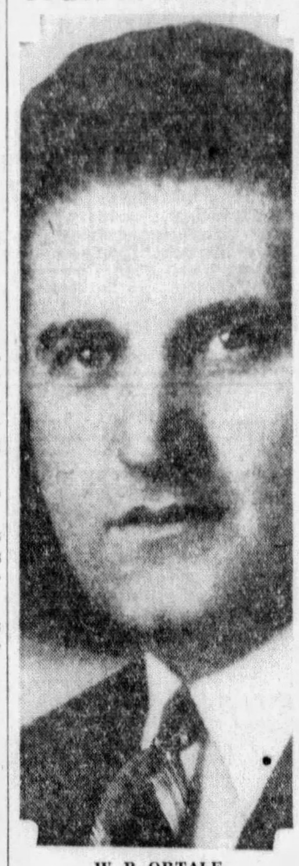
Mayor McNair wants to join what he calls "the fun" in McKees Rocks because "there is no excitement in Pittsburgh right now."

"The fun" is the controversy over the McKees Rocks budget, precipitated when Borough Controller D. J. Buckley refused to approve the budget until an audit of the borough's affairs has been made.

The Mayor said that he has been asked to take sides in the controversy as an associate counsel, but he refused to say on which side and borough officials professed to be equally in the dark.

The only thing bothering Mayor McNair in regard to the invitation, he said, is whether Pittsburgh Council will object to his acting as a lawyer while serving as Mayor.

Ordered Arrested



W. P. ORTALE

Mr. Ortale, president of the Bank of America Trust Company in Pittsburgh, ordered arrested after the discovery of a shortage of $106,700. He was ill today in the Mt. Lebanon home of his mother and arrest was deferred.

DEADLINE NEAR IN COAL FEUD

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—A possibility that President Roosevelt might be called upon to help end strife in the soft coal fields appeared today as Hugh S. Johnson's deadline for settlement—at dusk—approached.

Johnson told the operators, who are objecting strongly to NRA's wage increases and hour cuts, that he wanted the situation "cleaned up" by 6 o'clock tonight. He indicated he might give a "solution" unless things were settled by then.

Thus far, the President has taken no part in the coal problems, complicated by strikes and bloodshed. Alabama operators and Gov. Kump of West Virginia, both have signified their intention of appealing to the Chief Executive if a speedy settlement is not forthcoming.

Since Johnson's order establishing the seven-hour day and higher wages in the southern coal fields went into effect March 31, approximately 21,000 miners have been on strike in Alabama and resultant disorders sent national guardsmen into the troubled area.

Another conference was arranged for today between Johnson, representatives of Alabama operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

Score Hurt in N. Y. Clash Over Nazis

NEW YORK, April 21.—(INS.)—Several dozen persons suffered injuries early last night when a riot broke out between Nazi, anti-Nazi and Communist factions in Brooklyn. It was the third such outburst in as many days in metropolitan New York.

The trouble started, police reported, when 500 anti-Nazis flung themselves against police lines in an effort to storm a meeting of 1,200 members of the Friends of New Germany at Schwaben Hall.

RAIL LABOR MAY SHUN PLEA OF ROOSEVELT

Workers to Seek Part Restoration of Pay Cut

WASHINGTON, April 21.—(AP.)—Flat rejection by railroad labor of President Roosevelt's new plea for a continuation of the existing 10 per cent wage cut was indicated authoritatively today.

The workers will put forward, instead, a compromise demand for a restoration on July 1 of half the pay slash given them two years ago.

This became known as representatives of 21 standard railroad labor unions gathered for a renewal of conferences today with Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation.

Unless Eastman, directed by the President to resume his negotiations, can shake labor from this stand, a continuation of the weeks-long impasse appeared probable.

MAY SEEK INQUIRY

In this case, Mr. Roosevelt would carry out his intention of ordering "a thorough investigation by a fact-finding commission prior to July 1."

The immediate reaction of railroad management to the Chief Executive's latest effort, taken last night in a letter to Eastman, was not available here. The employers, however, have expressed willingness for a continuation of the 10 per cent cut.

Mr. Roosevelt reiterated his previous suggestion for a six months' continuance, but added a sharp suggestion that the carriers immediately better conditions for those workers "at the bottom of the heap."

RAPS LOW MINIMUM

The minimum wages of rail employes, he said, should be brought at once into conformity with NRA standards. He prodded also for changes in present systems of furloughs, part-time work and demotions.

He added he was convinced his suggestions were:

"What the welfare of the railroads, of their employes, and of the entire country demands as the immediate and temporary solution of this matter."

Apart from the immediate problem, the President had another cabinet committee at work today on a study of the whole railroad problem. He appointed it late yesterday, naming Secretaries Roper and Perkins and Attorney General Cummings.

FARLEY TELLS NEW AIR PLANS

NEWARK, N. J., April 21.—(AP.)—Postmaster General James A. Farley today stoutly defended the cancelllation of air mail contracts in a speech delivered at the laying of the corner stone of the new $6,150,000 postoffice and Federal building.

The contract cancellations, Farley said, have been "deliberately misconstrued and misrepresented" in some quarters, and have brought on "much political sniping." He added:

"When one goes behind the fogs raised by selfish financial and political interests he finds that these contracts were conceived and executed by collusion and fraud and that millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money were being distributed to selected groups in violation of the plain mandate of the law that such contracts could only be let by competitive bidding."

"The administration is earnestly seeking to put into effect a soung and legal air mail policy and to correlate all the phases of aviation in which the government is interested into a constructive program."

CLASH IN PARIS INJURES 200

PARIS, April 21.—(AP.)—Police ruled the streets of Paris again today after a night of violence seen by some as setting the stage for serious outbreaks to come.

Before police and mobile guards could quell a raging mob of 6,000 Communists and Extremists, at least 200 persons were injured by clubs, feet and fists. Officers arrested 940 persons.

The mob shouted its defiance around the City Hall in a demonstration against the government's recent decrees slashing the pay of civil employes. The disorders were viewed as merely a sort of "rehearsal" for May Day.

N. Y. Political Boss' Former Wife Sues

RENO, April 21.—(Universal.)—Mrs. Lotti S. Phillips, former wife of John J. Delaney, New York political leader, is secretly suing her present husband, E. J. Phillips, for a divorce, it was learned today.

Phillips is manager of the United Farmers' Telephone and Telegraph Company at Minden, 50 miles south of here. Utmost secrecy surrounds the suit, filed under a number only, but it is understood Mrs. Phillips alleges cruelty and seeks an injunction to tie up money she assertedly gave her husband to buy telephone stock.

SAFETY, HEALTH OFFICIALS UNITE IN DRIVE ON SLUMS

OUSTER ORDERS POSTED ON 154 HOUSES

Ax of Wreckers Ready As City Bureaus Push Clearance Plans

The city's greatest slum clearance campaign gained momentum today with disclosure that the Department of Public Safety and the Department of Public Health have effected close co-operation for the drive.

Lee Sellars, supervisor of housing in the Department of Health, has been assigned to work with George E. Evans, superintendent of building inspection in the Department of Public Safety, for the duration of the campaign.

So far, orders to vacate have been posted on 154 houses as a preliminary step for the demolition of these dwellings, which have come under the city officials' classification as slums.

WRECKERS READY

Wreckers are ready to go to work and raze 25 of these structures. Owners have given the city authority for the demolition of 87 buildings.

Co-operation of the Safety and Health departments has resulted in the use of a double-edged weapon in the city's drive against the slums.

When it is impossible to condemn some buildings on the ground of safety violations, Supt. Evans explained, action may be taken on the grounds of violating sanitary regulations.

Evans has attempted to bring about peaceful agreement on the tearing down of slum dwellings, but in cases where owners have proved balky and refused to grant the city authority he has proceeded to condemn the properties.

NEW RELIEF PROBLEM

He explained that those owners who have bowed to the city's program have not been charged for the work of demolishing the properties, an expense which ordinarily totals about $300 for each building razed.

Riddance of the slums has raised a new problem for relief agencies, city officials said. Many of the families ordered to vacate the condemned buildings have insufficient funds to pay for better living quarters; consequently, it is understood that the relief groups will ask the state to grant rent aid.

EVICTION STAY SOUGHT HERE

A self-appointed legislative committee investigating relief administration today was to propose to Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar a 30-day moratorium on evictions in Allegheny County pending adoption of a permanent relief rent program. The plan is suggested on behalf of 25,000 families dependent on the County Relief Board.

Decision to appear before the Sheriff came as a result of a meeting yesterday by the committee headed by State Representative Joseph A. Rectenwald, and the executive committee of the County Relief Board.

The committee has asked the Relief Board to give an accounting of expenditure of $18,600,000 in state and federal funds during the last 15 months at a meeting to be held next Friday. At this conference Senators from Allegheny County will be asked to attend and hear suggestions for a reduction in administrative costs of relief from their six colleagues, who during the last two weeks have been making complaints against the Relief Board.

'Aged Woman Hurt, Life Struggle Vain

Falling down a flight of stairs in her home, Mrs. Margaret Carnahan, 67, of 610 Delaware avenue, Oakmont, fractured her skull yesterday. Alone, the aged woman succeeded in dragging herself to a telephone and cried out to the operator before she lost consciousness. The operator warned neighbors. They found Mrs. Carnahan unconscious and summoned physicians, but Mrs. Carnahan died early today.

Free Shaler Township Man in Auto Death

Charles Dockman, 979 East Ohio street, Shaler Township, was free today of a charge of involuntary manslaughter, following his acquittal by a jury before Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff. He was tried in connection with the death of George Schilling, killed when the automobiles of the two men collided in East Ohio street near Washington Crossing Bridge last October 21.

Here he's loading a riot gun with a tear gas projectile shell such as modern-day police are using. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SEX EDUCATION IS ADVOCATED

Children should learn "the facts of life" before reaching the fifth grade, according to Dr. Caroline B. Zachry, here today to address the 500 teachers attending the conference of the Progressive Education Association in the William Penn Hotel.

Dr. Zachry, director of the Mental Hygiene Clinic at Montclair, N. J., State Teachers' College, pointed out that sex education was delayed too long in the present school system, due partly to the squeamishness of teachers themselves.

However, the good old Anglo-Saxon words for sex are used in Aliquippa schools. H. R. Vanderslice, president of the Western Branch of the Progressive Association and superintendent of Aliquippa schools, stated a spade was called such in his schools whenever necessary.

Another barrier to progressive education is the parents who keep their children young and useless—that is, inequipped to face the major problems of life—by holding them in a "hot-house of affection" and fostering "adult infantilism," Dr. Zachry added.

FREED IN BLIND CASE; REHELD

Robert Pennington, 500 Penn avenue, was ordered held for court by Magistrate J. W. McGowan today after police said they had found a stolen radio in his rooms. Martin Jenkins, 1008 Sheffield street, arrested with Pennington, was discharged.

The two youths had been seized as suspects in the torture robbery of George Stratigos, bowling alley proprietor, who was blinded by bandits a week ago. Stratigos was unable to identify them by their voices.

In searching Pennington's rooms, the police said they found a radio which had been stolen from a restaurant two days ago. Pennington, police said, explained the radio had been given him by a Negro.

Margaret and Olsen Smash Penguin Egg

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP.)—The much-discussed penguin egg, guarded and incubated alternately by Margaret and Olsen, the Bronx Zoo's two black-foot penguins, has been smashed beyond all possibility of ever becoming a penguin.

Margaret and Olsen did it themselves in a fight over just who was to do the incubating, zoo officials said today.

Spying Rouses Ire of Mayor, Fines Man $2

Mayor McNair, in jovial mood, appeared as magistrate in Oakland Police Court today, dismissing six of the seven men who were called before him on minor charges.

The only one to feel His Honor's ire was James Ison, 43, of 735 Naylor street, who was fined $2 because he loitered in Schenley Park yesterday, using field glasses to spy on couples in parked automobiles.

Three drunks and three men accused of disorderly conduct were freed after a friendly lecturing by the Mayor.

PUPILS STAND PAT IN STRIKE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 21.—(AP.)—In the heart of the Fayette coal fields, scene of many a bitter mine strike, some 300 students of North Union Township are holding fast in their "school strike."

The pupils, who walked out of their classrooms in the township high school Thursday, are protesting the removal of Principal J. D. Shaner. They staged a series of noisy demonstrations yesterday, flaunting banners reading

"We demand Shaner."

The principal called a meeting of the strike leaders for tomorrow night. He will attempt to persuade them to return to school.

INSULL GUARDS DEFENSE PLAN

International News Service.

ABOARD S. S. EXILONA, At Sea, April 21.—How Samuel Insull plans to fight the charges he will face when he arrives back in Chicago was a secret the former financier was carefully guarding as his "prison ship" sailed the blue Mediterranean today toward the North African coast.

Insull faces the sharpest legal battle of his career when he reaches Chicago and goes to trial on indictments growing out of the collapse of his $2,000,000,000 utilities combine. He will become the central figure in a trial certain to become one of the most famous in American history.

Yet the aged former magnate has given no indication, since he was surrendered to the United States authorities by Turkey, of what his plans are to defend himself against charges that may send him to the penitentiary. As far as can be learned he has engaged no attorneys and has no legal counsel other than a firm of solicitors in London.

Fall From Ladder Fatal to Painter

Leonard King, 47, of 327 Pitt street, died in South Side Hospital last night of a fractured skull received when he fell from a 10-foot ladder while painting at a gasoline station at South Ninth and Carson streets yesterday, according to a morgue report.

PUNCH RECIPES GIVEN BY DRYS IN NEW FIGHT

World Head, Governor Candidate Address Temperance Union

The Women's Christian Temperance Union, armed with a dozen new recipes for non-alcoholic fruit punches, prepared today to continue its fight to bury John Barleycorn for the second time.

Addressing a regional conference meeting in the First United Presbyterian Church, Oakland, last night, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, world president of the union, outlined plans for an educational campaign to teach the public "the true nature of alcohol."

The W. C. T. U., she emphasized, has not compromised its unconditional stand against liquor in any form—beer, wine or whisky.

URGES TAX SHIFT

John A. McSparran, dry candidate for Governor on the Republican and Democratic tickets, hailed by the meeting as the "next Governor of Pennsylvania," praised the stand of the W. C. T. U. against repeal and added:

"Our tax system is a crime. We should have long ago shifted the burden of taxation from the homes of our people to incomes, excess profits and inheritances where there is no element of sacrifice."

Mrs. John D. Pennington, national director Non-Alcoholic Fruit Products, called two small girls to the platform at yesterday afternoon's meeting to help her demonstrate the manufacture of the new fruit juice mixtures.

'BOOTLEGGING INCREASING'

Following the meeting, the ladies drank "White Ribbon Special," one of the new punches distributed by Mrs. Harry A. Ling, state director.

Commander John D. Pennington, investigator in charge, alcoholic beverage unit, Department of Justice, was also a visitor at the meeting yesterday. Asked about his work, he said:

"Bootlegging is on the increase."

Other speakers, besides Mrs. Boole, at last night's meeting included Mrs. Harry Samson, chairman of the women's division of Council of Churches of Christ in Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Catherine Wisler.

The recipe for "White Ribbon Special" follows: One and a half quarts strong orange pekoe tea, one large can crushed pineapple, two cups sugar, one cup lemon juice, two cups orange juice or cherry juice, and one and a half quarts of water.

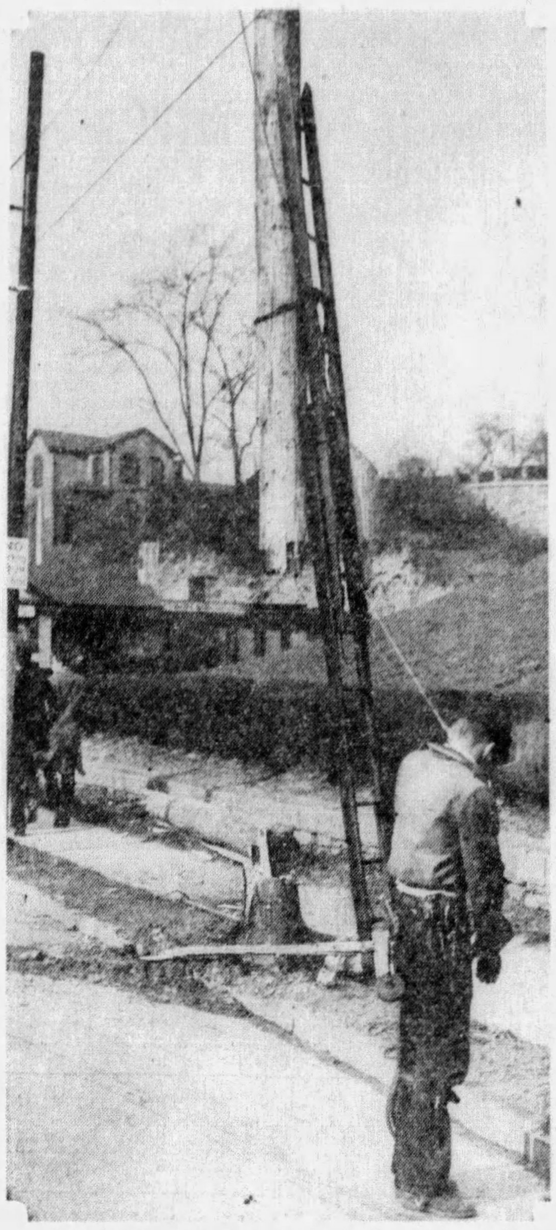
Four Families Chased From Home By Fire

Four families were routed when fire, starting in the cellar of a three-story rooming house at 343 Denniston avenue, swept through the upper floors of the building late yesterday. Children playing with fire were blamed by firemen. The families of Mrs. Mary Bonser, B. M. Carringer, John Dillahan and Edward Forquer were led to the street by police and firemen. Battalion Chief Fred S. Beckett estimated the damage at $3,000.

Auto Driver's Eye Cut in Pole Crash

Losing control of his car, Martin Golden, 27, of 1862 Jancey street, suffered an eye laceration as the auto struck a pole at Seventeenth street and Penn avenue early today. He was treated at St. Francis Hospital.

Pole Broken Twice!



POLE BROKEN IN TWO PLACES BY A DOCTOR'S AUTOMOBILE

Workmen at the West Liberty avenue telephone pole broken in two places—one section was carried away and another left dangling from the wires—by the coupe of Dr. A. D. Ardolino, 6529 Shetland avenue. He was only slightly injured in the crash.

AUTO CRASHES, SNAPS POLE

Dr. A. D. Ardolino, 27, of 6529 Shetland avenue, narrowly escaped serious injury early today when his coupe crashed into a telephone pole on West Liberty avenue, near Pauline avenue.

So powerful was the crash that the impact broke the pole off in two places, leaving the upper half dangling in the air, suspended by telephone wires.

Dr. Ardolino was helped from the wreckage of his new car by George R. Watt, of 2720 Larkins way, and taken to Mercy Hospital.

There it was determined that the doctor's injuries consisted merely of a laceration on his face and minor bruises.

A girl was injured early today when an automobile in which she was riding struck a pole at Fifth avenue and Beechwood boulevard after the driver lost control, police said.

Sarah Drosnes, 22, of 5523 Baywood street, was taken to West Penn Hospital with head and leg lacerations. Edwin Goldberg, 231 Melwood street, alleged driver of the car, escaped injury, police reported.

2 NEW ATTACKS ON GIRLS ROUSE SCHOOL HEADS

Chicago Spurs Drive Against Delinquency; 1 Boy Held, 1 Escapes

CHICAGO, April 21.—(AP.)—Two new attacks on small girls alarmed school authorities today and spurred them into redoubled action against juvenile delinquency in Chicago.

The victims of the attacks, both reported last night from the same North Side neighborhood, were Viola Betty Penderson, 4, and Peggy Jane Hanson, 5.

Viola was lured to a garage, where she was beaten and stabbed with a heavy steel file. Kenneth Palmetter, 9, arrested shortly afterward, confessed to the attack, police said. He was taken to the Juvenile Home.

Peggy Jane's assailant, an unidentified red-headed boy about 15, escaped. He took her to the rear of an apartment building.

Aroused by the two latest attacks and the death last week of Dorette Zeitlow, 2½ years old, who was lured to an abandoned ice house by George Rogalski, 13, school officials called psychiatrists to help in the drive to stamp out juvenile crime.

A psychiatric survey probably will be one of the first steps.

School authorities and psychiatrists are considering two types of surveys. One is the Los Angeles plan, which is compulsory. The other is the Minneapolis system, which is not compulsory. Dr. Ralph C. Hammil, head of a subcommittee of psychiatrists summoned by William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, said other methods also would be studied.

The Los Angeles plan calls all agencies in a co-ordinating council, provides for the interchange of juvenile records, and seeks to preclude the possibility of abnormal children continuing untreated as potential dangers to other children. Kenyon J. Scudder, in charge, recently said the plan had reduced by 800 per cent the number of juvenile cases going to the courts.

MILLEN, BRIDE GET JAIL 'DATE'

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service.

DEDHAM, Mass., April 21.—For the first time since his arrest, two months ago, as the "brains" of a trio of youthful scientific criminals, Murton Millen today was promised a meeting with his bride, 19-year-old Norma Brighton Millen, minister's daughter and alleged gunmoll.

The meeting was expected to occur during the week-end lull in the trial of Murton and his brother and Abe Faber for murder. The jury has been completed, and testimony will start being presented next week.

The setting for the reunion will be no Romeo and Juliet backdrop, but will take place amid the striped shadows within county jail, where both are, in separate cells.

The romance between Norma and Murton has blown hot and cold since she was jailed, six weeks ago, on the charge of being an accessory after the fact in connection with the machine-gun holdup of the Needham Trust Company, in which two policemen were killed.

FAIR, WARMER WEATHER DUE

Although Pittsburgh shivered under freezing temperatures which dropped to an official low of 32 degrees early today, the forecast for the week-end was fair with the mercury slowly rising.

From Newark and other parts of Northern Ohio came word of a severe snowstorm, the worst this late in the spring for many years, but the Weather Bureau here said there was no danger of winter swinging this way.

Temperatures here are due to rise into the 50s, the forecaster said.

The coldest on record here for this date was 22, in 1875, and it was as low as 26 in 1930.

Dr. McCready's Counsel To Renew Will Fight

Attorneys for the aged Dr. R. J. McCready, who was willed $12,000 a year by his late wife, Mrs. Matilda McCready, and wants more, will expound their views as opposed to those of attorneys for the estate of Mrs. McCready in court next week.

Judge J. W. Dawson, of Uniontown, Pa., will take the bench Friday morning to hear argument on a motion to dismiss Dr. McCready's suit for a bigger slice of his wife's $1,509,979 estate.

In hearings that dragged on all this week, Dr. McCready has fought Mrs. McCready's will, despite an agreement, signed before marriage, that he wouldn't.

Attorneys for her estate say the octogenarian doctor is out of luck.

But Dr. McCready says his wife hid the fatness of her pocketbook and then gave most of her estate to charity. And he thinks he has more coming to him.

'INS' Celebrates News Service Career on Air

NEW YORK, April 21.—A world-wide representation of newspapermen was gathered in New York today for the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of International News Service.

A delegation representative of the various countries served by International News Service will be present as two broadcasts commemorating the anniversary are transmitted around the world by two networks.

Among those in the delegation are T. C. Gooch, general manager of the Dallas Times-Herald; J. David Stern, publisher, and Harry T. Saylor, editor, of the Philadelphia Record, Camden Courier-Post and New York Evening Post; W. F. Bullock, London Daily Mail, August Halfeld, August Scherl Newspapers Union of Germany; Yusuo Fuwa, the Yomiuri Shimbun, Tokio, and others.

Joseph V. Connolly, president of International News Service, will speak at 4:45 p. m., eastern standard time, over the WABC-Columbia network on "25 Years That Have Changed the World," reviewing events of the past and forecasting news developments in the future. He will be preceded by the reading of a special message from President Roosevelt by Harry Von Zell, noted news announcer.

This will be followed at 6.30 p. m. over the WEAF coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Company by an address by Floyd Gibbons, noted "headline hunter," on the "Twenty-five Greatest News Stories of the Last 25 Years." These were chosen by Arthur Brisbane, who was to have broadcast them, but will be prevented from doing so by a cold. Mr. Gibbons will also introduce William A. Curley, editor of the New York Evening Journal, who will speak in behalf of the International News Service client editors.

THREE CHURCHES PLAN SPECIAL 'BIRTHDAY' SERVICES

PARISH MARKS ANNIVERSARY IN KNOXVILLE

Anniversaries of their founding are the occasion for a number of special services to be held tomorrow. At St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Grape and Bausman streets, Knoxville, the parish will celebrate its eighty-second anniversary with a two-day program. Also included in the celebration is the Church of the Incarnation which was started as St. Martin's Mission by the Bible class of St. Mark's over 45 years ago and in 1928 was merged with St. Mark's by Bishop Alexander Mann.

Services tomorrow will open with Holy Communion at 8 a. m., the Rev. Dr. Frederick Kempster, pastor, being the celebrant. At 11 a. m. the Rev. Dr. E. R. Hart, of Trinity Church, Michigan City, Ind., will preach a special sermon, to be followed at 12:30 by a buffet luncheon served in the church parlors. In the afternoon representatives from young people's societies of the diocese will join with the St. Mark group for a service at 3 o'clock, and at 8 p. m. there will be evening prayer and addresses by brothers of St. Barnabas, Gibsonia.

A special social program, W. H. Williams, presiding, will bring the festivities to a close Monday evening.

Events in connection with the seventy-fifth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Fortieth street and Howley avenue, will continue throughout the week. When its first charter was granted in 1859, St. John's bore the name of the German United Protestant Church of Lawrenceville, but in 1878, under the pastorate of the Rev. P. M. Reidenbach, its name was changed to the German Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Congregation. The first church built by the group still stands at the south end of the Washington Crossing.

Among those taking a major part in the celebration are the pastor, the Rev. George Schuster, and the Rev. Dr. John L. Ernst, of Detroit, Mich., a former pastor, who will speak at the "Organization Night" services Monday. Other speakers during the week include the Rev. Dr. G. J. Troutman, of Circleville, O.; the Rev. Otto Ebert, a former pastor; Attorney Hale Sipe, and the Rev. Dr. Walter E. Schuette, president of the eastern district of the American Lutheran Church, who will conclude the services on April 29.

Still another church to celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary is the Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church, Lockhart street, of which the Rev. John Henry Ward is pastor. The main service will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow when the Rev. S. M. Mackey, pastor of the church from 1891 to 1893, speaks.

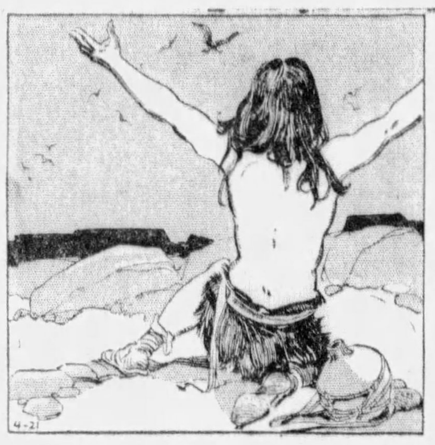
The Story of Jezebel

CHAPTER I — Told in Pictures By DAN SMITH

While he was king over Israel, Ahab took Jezebel as his wife, and he worshipped Baal. But Elijah the prophet put all the priests of Baal to the sword, and Ahab told Jezebel what Elijah had done.

And Jezebel, when she had heard this, sent a message to Elijah saying, "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time."



Then Elijah fled for his life, and left his servant at Beersheba while he himself journeyed into the wilderness. And while he slept there an angel touched him and said unto him, "Arise and eat."

Twice the angel fed Elijah, and in the strength of that meat he went forty days and nights and came unto Horeb, and at the Lord's command he found Elisha plowing with oxen, and cast his mantle upon him.

'ABE' LINCOLN MARBLE CAKE

First Made to Fete Proclamation of Emancipation

History enters the field of our prize recipes today with Mrs. Ernest Loeffler winning an award for her Abraham Lincoln marble cake. The cake's origin, as she tells it, is:

"I am sending you the recipe for a quaint cake of long ago called the 'Abraham Lincoln Marble Cake.' This cake was first made to commemorate the Emancipation Proclamation."

She goes on to suggest that someone compound a Roosevelt cake, as well as other dishes which will carry a historical suggestion with them. Mrs. Doris Pollard's recipe goes back through the even more distant years, for her Banbury cakes, she wants us to know, are a product of 300 years ago.

Your favorite dishes should be equally worthy of a prize. Why not give other women a chance to benefit from them by sending in the recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph? All recipes used receive either a $5 or a $1 prize. No recipes are returned.

Junior Birdmen Memberships Being Sent Out to All; Features and Activities Ready!

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Greetings, members! Today we end the first week of our junior birdmen columns and with the details on how you will soon be able to organize a flight squadron of your own, which will appear in our regular Sunday column tomorrow in the Sunday Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, we will include the organization work of our club which is now well on its way.

Fired with the spirit of patriotism and air adventure, over one thousand boys and girls have sent in applications during these first six days to the Pittsburgh wing and reports from junior birdmen wing cities all over the country report just as favorable progress. The Junior Birdmen is already one of the largest organizations for boys and girls in the United States and will no doubt surpass all others in the near future. The daily mail continues to be heavy and thousands of boys and girls are enrolling for membership just the minute they hear about our organization and daily column.

Every member Can Help

Every one of you members can help! Tell your friends about the junior birdmen, our features, our activities and our daily column. Certainly they will want to become members and help you in building one of those flight squadrons Mr. Lawrence Shaw will tell you about tomorrow. And when you get your wings and membership card, be sure you wear that beautiful emblem on your lapel, sweater or dress. Wherever you go, show your friends that you are a junior birdman and an ardent junior aviation fan. The surest way of doing this is to always wear your wings!

Be sure, too, that you always carry your membership card with you. It was made just the size to fit into your wallet, if you have one, so have it on hand wherever you go. You can never tell where it will gain for you some advantage or privilege over other boys and girls who are not members of the junior birdmen.

Junior Birdmen Calendar

On Monday, when we start our first column feature, I will also try to have ready for you our first Junior Birdmen calendar. This calendar will be published in our column about once a week and will give you many dates when various features and activities will be conducted for you.

The first feature, on Monday, is the air dictionary and I want every one of you members to be sure that you save every one of these installments. Keep them in your scrap book where you may refer to them when it may become necessary for you to look up some word, phrase or aviation term with which you are not familiar. They will come in particularly handy when the beginner's course in model building begins. And word from national headquarters states that this will start about May 1. That isn't so long off.

Remember, too, that later on we are going to have a scrap book contest so that it will be to your advantage to start now, and start right. Boys and girls joining the Junior Birdmen at a later date will be able to enter the scrap book contest, too, but will lose several points on incompleteness, for they will be unable to obtain back copies of our columns.

By the way! Here's some flash news for you. Just as I am preparing this column for you news is received that our first activity is to start on Tuesday with an announcement of a gala contest for all members. A special message informs me that it will be an easy and yet intriguing activity that every member will want to enter and the prizes will be well worth your while competing for. Not only will there be prizes for the winners of the Sun-Telegraph wing, but also national prizes for the selected winners chosen from entries of all Junior Birdmen cities.

Say, that sure knocks the wind out of our slip stream. Looks like we have plenty to look forward to next week. The engines are being tuned and we are just waiting for that "contact" signal to get off!

Better Join Right Now!

If you are not a member of the Junior Birdmen, take my advice and join right now! Remember unless you are a junior birdman or birdwoman you will not be privileged to enter that contest we will announce on Wednesday. It is not to be a model plane contest or anything like that yet. It will be an activity that every boy and girl, a group "A" member or a group "B" member, will be able to enter. There will be two sets of prizes, one for each membership age group. Both sets of awards will be exactly alike so that you younger members have the same opportunity to win the same prizes as the older members. That's what we promised you we would always do, you know!

By the way, I have received many fine letters from members applying for membership in our Pittsburgh wing and I wish that I could print them all for you in our column. Of course this is quite impossible as it would take columns and columns of space. However, here is an excerpt from one of them:

Bob Pyper, 17, of 671 Interboro avenue, who is the youngest person in the state holding a private pilot's license—"I think every boy and girl should know something about airplanes and how they fly. Even though I can fly an airplane I think that I can learn many interesting new things about aviation by joining the Junior Birdmen and building some model planes."

Happy Landings!

Don't forget to read the directions for organizing your own flight charter in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. And don't forget to look for the first installment of our air directionary on Monday.

HAPPY LANDINGS!

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It's a sure thing that you can't take radio too seriously. That was what I almost did. I was asked by several Globe Trotters for tickets to "Captain Henry's Show Boat" broadcast when the "Show Boat" arrived in Pittsburgh.

I find out now that the cruise of the Show Boat is mythical and although it was supposed to be in Cincinnati last week and in Pittsburgh in the next week or so the cast of the production doesn't leave New York.

Until I asked the WCAE operators myself I was almost ready and willing to believe that it would be tied up shortly at the Pittsburgh wharf.

"Be Kind to Animals Week" has prompted Anne J. D. Muenchen, Dormont, to write a story in rhyme of what happened to her Italian neighbor, whose landlord refused her permission to keep a dog in the house.

The dog is so attached to little Louisa and little Louisa is so attached to the dog that on occasions when the dog needs punished Louisa tells her mother to whip her instead.

Mrs. Elsie, Oakmont—I am sure that if you show that you are able to care for a child and give it the proper environment the Allegheny County Juvenile Court will permit you to have one of the more unfortunate children who would grow and be happy in the warmth of a motherly smile.

You might see the superintendents of any of the institutions for homeless children, too.

3 Americans' Death Plane Parts Found

SHANGHAI, April 21.—(INS.)—Definitely establishing that the craft met with disaster, parts of the framework of the airplane with three Americans aboard which has been the object of an intensive search for more than a week, were found today at Chinghai, near Ningpo.

Robert V. Gast, of Louisville, Ky.; Ivan Karlson, of Donna, Tex., and James Frink, of Miami, Fla., were the Americans aboard when the plane disappeared.

Carefree Carnival Excellent Show

Tonight's Carefree Carnival, heard over WCAE at 12:30 a. m., is worth sitting up for. It is riot of comedy and melody.

"Our Family," Sun-Telegraph drama on WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock, includes a lesson in interior decoration, with Pa and Uncle Henry as pupils.

Notes About Radio Stars, Stations

By AIRCASTER

Claude Morris, long associated with KDKA as announcer and director of productions, has resigned.

He leaves for New York May 1, answering the lifelong, siren call of the stage.

Claude resigned first a year ago, but was called back to the pioneer station. This time he is determined to follow his desire to a finish, and it will doubtless be a most creditable one.

* * *

Deep-sea Diver Frank Smith, occasionally heard on my 6:30 spots on WCAE and WJAS, will be featured on the Pittsburgh Varieties Tuesday night at 7:15, on KDKA.

Smitty will tell a thrilling story of being buried alive in a tunnel cave-in, 150 feet below the surface of the sea.

* * *

Sondra Kostner, (Mrs. Ed Harvey,) heard in tonights episode of "Our Family," trapses off to the Kostner family homestead in Chicago after this evening's broadcast, to return in time for next Saturday's program.

PCW TEAM

Marian Young, Wilkinsburg songbird recently acquired by WCAE, is a real radio find, likely to make her mark.

A Pennsylvania College for Women graduate, and taking Sylvia Stein's place in the So-and-So Trio, she makes it an all-PCW team. Virginia Miller and Gene Llewellyn also are alumni.

Ben Ames Williams, sojourning at Sea Island Beach, a balmy semi-tropical resort off the coast of Georgia, writes gratefully, "Thanks for your applause of 'They Grind Exceeding Small.' Our rado hereabouts didn't pick it up decently; so I don't know whether Pittsburghers' appreciation is justified or not." It was.

And Alexander Woollcott, writing apropos of the story of my father's wig, (Aircaster program some time ago,) says he was amused. "It was a good story: much too good to give away," Alex opines.

I've been giving them away for three years.

MUSIC

String Symphonic Ensemble Society

Carnegie Music Hall

PROGRAM

Symphonic Spirituelle	Hamerik
A Rain Song	Schlieder
Etude Caprice
Minuetto	Van Westerhout
Preludio
Serenata
Overture for Flute and Strings	Bach
Fugue in A Minor

The Pittsburgh String Symphonic Ensemble, under the direction of Oscar DelBianco, gave its closing concert last night in Carnegie Music Hall.

Mr. Lissfelt

The program was a request program made of the most favored numbers played during the season and therefore needs no further comment. One other work was added, the Bach Overture for flute and strings and gave us occasion again to hear Joseph Mariano as soloist, one of the most gifted flutists heard here in years and a Pittsburgh product.

During intermission Dr. Watson Marshall deftly showed the development of the organization and made an appeal for its life. May we contribute our word and say too, that this ensemble be given means to survive. The type of music which it can give us otherwise remains unheard, for it is music in volume and character just between the string quartet and the symphony orchestra. It cannot encroach on either of the others and has already revived for Pittsburgh the most delightful music of the past centuries never which students should hear and which mere appreciative people have until now not heard. How often the words "First time in Pittsburgh" has been attached to the various numbers of the ensemble's programs.

And so we hope for a survival of this music into next season, for the ever-growing audience seems to be with us in this wish.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

See where all the brain trusters are saying the whole Wirt affair was a joke on him. In other words they framed up to make a joke out of him; now are we right sure that they ain't making a joke out of the taxpayer, too.

Japan last week announced they had taken over the supervision of China, in person, and that American, British, French, or German, would kindly take notice, but see by today's papers they claim they were a little too ambitious, and that other nations can go into China, but will have to have all passports "visa, or is that viza," by Tokio.

Yours,
WILL.

Society People Stream Into London

Universal Service.

LONDON, April 21.—From the four quarters of the globe society folk streamed into London today for the social season. With fox hunting over, many came from the counties, and those who escaped the rigors of the English winter on the Riviera and in Egypt also poured in.

Among recent arrivals was Lady Granard, the former Beatrice Ogden Mills, who has returned in time to help her husband, now the Lord Chamberlain, make arrangements for the forthcoming royal courts and decide who shall receive tickets of admission to the royal lawn at the Ascot races.

Lord and Lady Fermoy—he is an American-born peer who succeeded to the title in 1920, before which he was known merely as Edward Maurice Roche—are said to be expecting an interesting event. Lady Fermoy is the former Ruth Gill. Lord and Lady Fermoy come to London only during the season. They spend the rest of the time in their highland home.

The Spanish embassy was the scene of an interesting reception when Mme. TEXTS DELUGE RUSHMORE JUDGES

As thousands of texts pour into the regional judging committees daily throughout the country, greater thousands are being either completed or started in America's enthusiastic participation in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition.

Men, women and children everywhere are stirred by the great opportunity being presented by the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers. All are invited to write their version of America's epic—a 600-word text of their nation's progress as based upon nine specific episodes of history—one entry of which will become the basis for the final inscription planned to be carved on the national monument being created in South Dakota.

Cash and scholarships will be the awards for the best efforts, but the honor of having created the text which will be read through the generations of a million years is the cherished ambition of all participants.

Sufficient time still awaits new aspirants to the national honor. You can begin tomorrow. Complete rules, general information and list of awards will be published in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph

Congress Could Start Candy Pull On Its Own Hook

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

It's springtime along the Patomac. The budget has burst into bloom. There's cherry blossoms on the deficit.

Soon Congress will adjourn after a tough winter among the potted palms.

That threatened mutiny didn't get far. The boys kept opening and closing the oven door to see how the pie was doing and the crust fell.

Then the President came home when the thing was only half-baked. Now, the lads again await that glad yell, "it's all right, men, he's got on his yachting cap."

If Congress wants to do anything on its own hook it might start a candy pull.

But the Navy is never the right size when Astor's boat is in dry dock.

LEISURE IN THE CHIFFON MOOD

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NO ONE has to be a bride to go slightly berserker over the fluttering spring hostess gowns now being offered to us, though most of them look like fair game for the trousseau. Women with long memories can judge just how useful they will be in the matron's or bachelor girl's wardrobe come breathless days and the sweet cool of the evening.

* * *

ONCE THE furnace is sealed up for another season, even the most delicate draperies have a chance to survive in the home, and the woman whose patience is just about over when her evening bath is taken can pull a lovely chiffon or lace tea gown over her permanent and become the picture of domestic hospitality in a jiffy.

Don't be modest about trailing skirt and sleeves when you invest in one of these confections. They are the stuff from which negligees are made into toilettes, and the mood of them is not at all kitchenette.

* * *

FLOWER TINTS are the most fashionable for this season's coats and frocks for the house. It really is new, for last year there was a vogue for batik shades in which stained glass shades were given a tryout in diaphanous stuffs. Many a new model is made from summer velvet, a fabric which is particularly soft and amenable to flowing grace. Polka dots of velvet embossed on a mesh fabric make lovely effects which can be shown off on satin or chiffon slips.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

White lace with a huge floral pattern on its delicate mesh makes the tunic bodice of this spring hostess gown. The flounce is of white chiffon, and so is the twisted girdle and sash.

A soft satin slip in pale yellow, topped by a coat of chiffon appliqued with crescents of the satin, is used for this hostess gown. The shoulders and sleeves are distinctly Russian in effect.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Sometimes we don't know how fortunate we are, fellows! Yesterday there was a story in the paper about a girl who regained her sight after being blind for 15 years. All her friends were blind people. When she could see again, she could hardly believe it. Everything was strange to her.

And she said:

"How can I be perfectly happy when all my blind friends still are blind? I feel ashamed somehow, before them—me with my sight restored and they still in darkness. If only I could share my sight with them!"

We who can see take our sight as a matter of course. We can see the faces of our friends. We can see all the beautiful things in the world. But we don't know how fortunate we are.

We often wonder how people can even live without sight. And yet we know that some of them triumph over even that handicap. They are so brave that one forgets they are blind.

There are some students attending the University of Pittsburgh now who are blind. And yet they make good grades and learn the same lessons as the students who can see.

They have their school books read to them. They take down their notes in braille shorthand so that they can feel the letters on the papers. And some of their instructors model pictures for them with wire.

So it seems that even blindness cannot hold a brave fellow back very much. Some of the greatest men and women who have ever lived were blind, including the marvelous poet, Homer. Read the beautiful English translations of what he wrote. Hear the music and the power in his words.

Of course, only a few blind people are so brave and talented. We do not want to be blind. And we want to do what we can to keep blindness from coming to anybody. Men in coal mines and machine shops should wear goggles to protect their eyes. When boys and girls play they shouldn't shoot arrows or throw sticks that might blind a friend.

AID TO CHILDREN WINS ORCHIDS FOR WOMEN

For their assistance to unfortunates, Miss Clarissa A. Moffitt, teacher in the Morse School, and Mrs. Jesse D. Bowers, of Crafton, president of the board of directors, New Future Home, today were awarded "Winchell orchids."

Miss Moffitt is honorary president of the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association and was nominated for an orchid, because she has devoted several years to the extra care of under-privileged and prevocational children without remuneration.

Mrs. Bowers for three years has served as president of the New Future Home on the North Side.

During that time she has received no financial reward, but has created an organization that is accomplishing a great amount of good, in the opinion of Pittsburgh welfare leaders.

Both women will receive orchids, named for the Sun-Telegraph's columnist, Walter Winchell, and provided by local members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

Pay Bank Depositors

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS:

As an important help toward national recovery, the undersigned urge passage of the bill introduced by Representative McLeod, now before Congress, which provides for paying in full depositors of closed banks which belonged to the Federal Reserve System.

Toward this end we urge that the RFC make loan arrangements with the closed banks.

This procedure would give positive stimulus to business by converting frozen, idle and at present useless bank deposits into immediately available purchasing power.

We urge immediate Congressional action on the bill introduced by Representative McLeod.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

Roosevelt's Inside Trouble Shooter Due to Quit

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The spring breezes are whispering that Frank Walker is going to leave around July 1.

Walker has been President Roosevelt inside trouble shooter. Whenever there was a particularly ticklish job of rein pulling, coordinating or pacifying to be done, the President has called on his good friend.

The latest job assigned to Walker was co-ordination of about 115 new federal agencies, organization of a general bureau of New Deal information and getting the new home financing campaign started.

Walker's friends say he will have that job in shape in about 10 weeks and then will go back to his private business.

REASON

Walker came down here originally for six weeks. Those six weeks have stretched out into a year. The only way he has been able to handle his business affairs lately is to commute to New York over week ends.

FRIENDSHIP

Walker has been one of the main manipulators of the New Deal, although always in the background. He is the kind of man every successful President needs at his side, a good friend who stays out of the limelight and is ready to sacrifice himself for the boss. He was the center of a censorship uproar when he set up the central statistical agency The uproar died because the board appears to have been fair in its figures. More lately, some of the political critics have taken a few mild shots at him for failure to harmonize the varying new federal agencies. Those shots apparently were aimed over Walker's shoulder at the fact that anyone who can get harmony out of that 115-piece band is not a bandmaster but a Houdini.

His standing is shown by the general circulation given untruthful stories that he might take Louis Howe's place inside the White House. There is nothing in it, of course, except a rather embarrassing tribute to Walker.

PANTS

Howe is active around the White House and wants to be more so, in disrespect of his health.

His doctors have found a way of keeping him down. They refuse to give him his trousers every day until after lunch. They were forced to that extreme when he promised to remain at the office only three hours on several occasions and then remained six.

He is a good bit of a philosopher and a humorist, and he has fooled the doctors again by transacting half of his day's work from his bedroom in a lounging robe. Said he to a recent caller:

"I consider it an outrage for doctors to make such a handsome man as I receive visitors before I get my makeup on."

HEALTH

Miss Perkins has managed to keep it more or less a secret that she has been working for several weeks on a survey of the possibilities of general federal price fixing.

She is the most active member of an inner Cabinet committee appointed to recommend a policy on that issue.

She is justified in proceeding under cover, not only because it is a touchy subject, but because nothing probably will ever come of it. The difficulties of federal price-fixing are amply illustrated by what has happened in milk during the past six months.

The differences in production methods, costs and capitalization in every section, and in every firm, make the task so tremendous as to be impossible.

BOOSTING

Something will come, however from another secret survey being conducted by the administration into obsolescence in the capital goods markets.

Who is making the investigation is not definitely known, but it may be Walker's outfit.

The idea is to learn all possible replacements which could be made for capital goods and then to have the government do something about stimulating replacements by encouraging easy financing of them.

It is the thing most needed now. The capital goods market is lagging woefully while consumers goods has been recovering.

Notes

Weighty Brookings Institute researchers are responsible for this ditty on the AAA:

"Six million pigs went to market; thirty million pigs stayed home; one million pigs made relief meat; five million pigs made foam."

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau took to heart the talk that he might some day leave the Treasury to be ambassador to France Privately and ardently, he informed friends that nothing like that was in the wind now. Some of Morgenthau's associates went so far as to suggest the talk was started by inflationists who wanted to get him out, although that is not correct.

Best newshound in the Senate is Senator J. Ham Lewis, who not only knows everything going on in the Senate, but everything going on back home in Illinois. Tom Corcoran, the young Anthony Advocate, never wears a hat. His vocabulary resembles that of former Justice Holmes. Speaking of the backwoods vote getting ability of Mississippi's Bilbo, a politician recently asserted:

"Boy, he shakes the bushes,"

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION
THE SENATE
SENATOR BARBOUR, OF NEW JERSEY IS A STUDY OF RESTRAINT AND QUIET DIGNITY. ONE OF HIS FELLOW SENATORS, NAMELY, THE LOUISIANA KINGFISH HAS BEEN "TAPPED" SEVERAL TIMES, BUT NO INTELLIGENT PERSON HAS EVER ATTEMPTED TO "HANG ONE" ON MR. BARBOUR'S CHIN. HIS SIZE IS SUFFICIENT TO CAUSE ANY OPPONENT TO HESITATE WHILE HIS REPUTATION AS A FIGHTER JUSTIFIES ABANDONING ANY IDEA OF "POPPING" HIM. SENATOR BARBOUR WAS ONCE THE AMATEUR CHAMPION HEAVYWEIGHT, AND JIM CORBETT SAID HE COULD LICK ANY MAN IN THE WORLD — AMATEUR OR PROFESSIONAL.

U. S. MARKS WAR ANNIVERSARY

Associated Press.

America remembered today two of her greatest tragedies—the Maine and the Alamo—that gave rise to two of her most inspiring battle cries.

Thirty-six years ago today, the United States went to war with Spain. The cry:

"Remember the Maine!"

Ninety-eight years ago today, the Texans defeated the Mexicans in the battle of San Jacinto, Tex. The cry:

"Remember the Alamo!"

The battleship Maine went down after an explosion in Havana Harbor February 15, 1898, carrying 266 men to death. A board of inquiry reported that a mine caused the disaster.

Congress demanded the withdrawal of Spain from Cuba; Spain declared war April 24 and the next day Congress declared that war had existed since the 21st.

City Desk

Hey, Mike, a Clark St. riot—take a photog when you go.
And don't forget that racket yarn we've got in Cicero;
About the picture, Charlie, on the murder for the "Peach."
We've got to keep the final loose, to hold the President's speech.

Tell Kelly he can come on in, without "the City Hall."
He's got to make a deadline on that twenty-story fall;
They ought to stage a raid tonight on Beberenson's burlesque;
Call on fourteen, Hazel—just a minute—City Desk!

I think the boss is screwy on that liquor expose,
He'll get himself in one swell jam on yarns like that, some day;
I wish—when you get time, you mug—you'd find out how to spell;
I've got to beat it home tonight, the wife is raising hell.

I've got a hunch we're being scooped on that red-headed yap;
It looks to me as if the gal is set to take the rap.
But she should swing a jury—she is not unpicturesque;
Why doesn't something happen—gosh, it's quiet—City Desk!

Raft, Menjou In Penn Film Of Bullring

By MICHAEL SHAW

George Raft, once a screen gangster, more lately a ballroom dancer on the Maurice model, becomes a Mexican bullfighter in his newest picture, "The Trumpet Blows," now on view in the Penn.

It must be said at once that this is not Mr. Raft's most successful part. The movie as a whole is interesting, with tense moments and some humorous bits. The actual scenes in the bullring are technically correct and rather complete, stopping just short of showing the "moment of truth"—which, as all good followers of Ernest Hemingway know, means the actual killing of the bull.

Yet Mr. Raft is neither happy nor convincing as a matador. Cape and pigtail and cocked hat can not submerge his general hard-boiled method and his hardboiled talk; the diction seems particularly incongruous under the circumstances.

On the other hand, Adolphe Menjou, as Matador Raft's elder brother, provides a virtuoso performance. He turns Mexican with apparent gusto; he is romantic and poetic and whimsical and cruel—and natural. All the acting honors go to this veteran. The picture is distinctly Menjou's.

The story is based on the old themes of brotherly love and regeneration. Pancho Menjou has literally buried his identity as a bandit of the Robin Hood-Villa type, and set himself up as a respectable rancher. He wishes Manuelitos Raft to settle down and marry into an aristocratic family; particularly since he knows Raft has lost courage in the bullring after a goring.

The brothers quarrel over a dancer, played by Frances Drake. But after both have proved their bravery, the younger by finishing a bull while badly wounded, the elder by attending the fight in Mexico City and risking arrest, they are reunited and all ends happily.

Among the secondary players is Katherine DeMille, who appears as a serving maid in whom Raft is momentarily interested. Miss DeMille, the daughter of Cecil B., proves a charming young lady of very generous proportions, and a capable actress, too.

On the stage we find Anatol Friedland's tabloid adaption of the musical comedy, "Fifty Million Frenchmen." It is a breezy production, boasting excellent principals and a particularly large, well-trained and cleverly costumed chorus. The smartest of Cole Porter's tunes from the original show have been retained, and they wear surprisingly well.

Richard Lane is a brisk hero and master of ceremonies. Al Norman, with the aid of two stooges in the audience, a la Phil Baker, puts over a comedy and dancing skit that stops the show. Some of his jokes are hardly of the parlor variety, but they are funny.

Venita Gould does a great many impersonations—some better than others—of movie stars, including the inevitable impersonation of Mae West. There is also the inevitable fan dancer, a little more modest this time.

Negro Revue In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Underneath the sophistication which they've borrowed from their white brothers and sisters of the stage, negroes still retain full measure of that happy-go-lucky spontaneity which characterizes their race and so we find the "Hot Chocolates" at the Pitt getting one of the biggest "hands" of the year.

The traditional darky songs are missing, but their lackadaisical black-man pleasentry is at its best in Radcliffe and Rodgers. No Mississippi ballads for them; they go internationally tuneful with Italian "My Maria," a blarneyed "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and Germany's waltz melody, "Two Hearts in Three-Quarter Time."

Decidedly reverting to the primitives of Africa for her dance inspirations is a very brown Baby Cox, who casts aside all restraints in her numbers. Avis Andrews chooses poise and the songs of the moderns, to gain her applause ending up, strangely enough, with the Jewish chant, "Eh, Eh!!"

For real grit and ability "Peg Leg" Bates tops them all. Tap and twist and turn, quickly, with a great big smile—no wonder the audience goes for him in a solid body. And they like the dancing, singing trios, too . . . , the Lucky Seven Three and the Gobs, for their dancing merriment is catching.

Through it all Leroy Smith and his orchestra syncopate a negro setting of music which cleverly moans and rollicks with well chosen sound effects.

Family problems, a father who comes back" and a younger son dominated by his brother, are the theme outlines of "The Quitter" on the screen in which Emma Dunn and Charles Grapewin play major sympathetic roles in a domestic near-tragedy.

HOLLYWOOD, April 21.—Hello! Hollywood's whirligig of news spattered out all sorts of strange twists—Isabel Jewell, who doesn't like being referred to as Lee Tracy's gal friend (but she bowed out of her M-G-M contract because he was no longer there), was all set to do a flock of free-lance work, but found herself back at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Isabel is doing a featured role in "The Thin Man," that swelegant mystery yarn . . . On with the news parade—Ann Sothern is out as Jack Haley's leading woman in "Here Comes the Groom," and Patricia Ellis has been loaned by Warners for the role . . . Universal is hot on the idea of remaking "Show Boat" as a super-special, and is offering Roy Del Ruth flocks of money to direct.

Hearst News Review

Spectacular pictures of the opening of the baseball season are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with The Globe Trotter describing the events.

The latest bullet train, streamlined and made entirely of stainless steel, is given its trial run in Philadelphia and attains a speed of 107 miles an hour. It weighs less than an ordinary coach and is propelled by a Diesel electric plant of 600 horsepower. The Hearst Metrotone News airplane has a difficult time keeping ahead of it.

Postmaster General Farley is seen and heard as he presents to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt the first sheet of an issue of three million special postage stamps printed by the government as a tribute to Mother's Day. They bear a reproduction of Whistler's famous painting of his mother.

Jack Dempsey is seen in the role of referee of a rough and tough wrestling match at Dallas, Tex. When the wrestlers refuse to "break" at his command, he uses his famous wallop and a couple of kicks.

Mrs. Smith Goes on a Diet

MRS. ANN SMITH, 42 years of age and very healthy, went on a diet a short time ago. She felt, she said, that she was growing a trifle too stout. May I present you with a few reactions? . . . .

* * *

A FRIEND: I think you're very foolish, Ann. Honestly, I do. What's the sense of weakening yourself for no reason? Why, I was only reading in the paper yesterday about two or three movie actresses who have died because they went on strenuous diets. You want to live, don't you?

What's that? How about me? Why, my dear Ann, of course I've been on a diet. Two or three times, as a matter of fact. But you mustn't forget, darling, that I'm younger than you are. Well, maybe not so much younger in years. But—well, I look younger, if you know what I mean.

I—what did you say? Compared to you, I look like a cow? Why, Ann Smith, how dare you! . . .

* * *

A POMERANIAN: Now I ask you! She goes on a diet, orders sweets out of the house—and I don't get any more candy.

If she wants to diet, it's okay with me. But why should I have to suffer? . . .

* * *

A MILLINERY SALESMAN: I'm telling you the ardent truth, dear Mrs. Smith. You never looked better in all your life. So trim! So neat! So absolutely gorgeous!

I don't know how you do it. I absolutely don't. Why, when you walked in, I hardly recognized you. And you're doing it all on a diet that's not too severe, aren't you? Isn't that absolutely marvelous?

I'm so glad you stopped in, dear Mrs. Smith, because I have two new hats here that absolutely coincide with your new, slender lines. Yes, they just arrived this morning. Isn't that a coincidence? . . .

* * *

HER COOK: Dat woman is done gone crazy agin. Eatin' nothin' but grapefruit and stuffin' herself full of salad and sech. She's gonna kill herself, dat's whut she's gwine do. And jes' 'magine. She told me dis mawnin' not to keep any sugar in the house!

Ah think dat, tomorrer, Ah'm handin' in mah notice. When Ah has mah tea, Ah wants mah three lumps. Either the sugar comes back or Ah'm goin'! . . .

* * *

A HORSE: Can't fool me. I can tell by the bounce that this customer is one of those diet dames. So she wants to lose weight, does she?

Well, I'll help her. I think I'll go into an unexpected gallop. She may holler a little—but she'll lose weight, even if it is only in one spot. Here I go.

Wow, listen to her yell! . . .

* * *

A DOCTOR: That's right, Mrs. Smith. One pill on retiring and another just before breakfast.

And—er—by the way, Mrs. Smith, might I remind you that—er—last month's—er—bill is—er—unpaid—er—as yet—er—? . . .

* * *

AN AUNT: What—no sugar?

* * *

HER DAUGHTER: Oh, Tom, I've got news for you. What do you think has happened? Mother's on a diet!

Isn't it strange what women will do when they get to be mother's age? . . .

* * *

A NEIGHBOR: I have a laugh for you, Henry. You know that Smith woman next door? Well, she's on a diet. Sure. Her cook told our cook.

Ah, that's sweet of you, darling. That's a pretty compliment. "No matter what happens, she'll never look the way I do." That's lovely of you. I appreciate——

Say, wait a minute. Just—how—did—you—mean—that? . .

* * *

MRS SMITH: My God, I've gained three pounds! . . .

'Wild Cargo' Thrills in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

Frank Buck's new thrill picture, "Wild Cargo," feature in the Stanley, is a circus menagerie in the raw and unconquered state. Similar in nature to Buck's previous picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," it shows the intrepid animal trapper capturing alive many animals, birds and reptiles of the Malayan jungle, including a man-eating tiger. These beasts are obtained for sale to zoos, and the interest—and what interest!—lies in picturing, in detail, just how it is done.

It is sometimes rather simple, as Mr. Buck illustrates, both by picture and by oral directions, for the voice of the hunter enthrallingly describes all the action of the exciting scenes. For instance, if you want to get yourself a big orang-utan that could tear you apart, just crack the limb of the tree on which he is sitting with a couple or rifle shots so that he will tumble to the ground. Don't forget to supply yourself with a number of husky natives holding a steel-wire net to catch him as he falls, and wrap him up before he can get over his surprise and clop you one with his mighty fist.

For a tiger the method is different. You dig a pit in his path, and cover it with branches and leaves. Then when he falls in all you have to do is to fish him out. Very simple. Just lasso a few of his legs and his neck and elevate him by means of rope and derrick. Then YOU get down into the pit, arrange an open cage beneath and lower him into it. Don't forget to close and bar the door of the cage.

Perhaps you'd like a snake 12 or 14 feet long and thick in proportion. Simply step up in front of him as close as you can get at the safe end of a 10-foot pole, on the end of which is a snare that you quickly slip over his head and tighten. One of your boys then grabs his tail, another clutches him amidships, and you ease him into a box. Same directions go for a cobra—not so long, but deadlier. Don't leave the lid of the cobra box insecure, as he might get loose and go for you. You'll just have to see the picture to find out what to do in that case.

Buck also showed how to catch a whole herd of wild elephants, a rampaging rhinoceros, a cassowary, monkeys, vampire bats, leopards and mouse deer. But you won't want to catch the latter, for they are only about as large as kittens, and Mr. Buck is opposed to their capture. Be sure to mind the teacher in that, as in other things—and you won't get hurt.

But before trying any of the methods, you'd better see the picture.

Drama League Has Judge For Jury

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The overshadowing event in Little Theater circles during the coming week will be the annual one-act-play contest of the Drama League at the Irene Kaufmann auditorium Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. Nine or 10 groups will compete for the trophies and cash prizes, and instead of a whole bench of judges the decision will be rendered by one adjudicator — E. Iden Payne. While his task is not easy nor enviable, the outcome is sure to be more satisfactory than it has ever been under the "jury system."

Mr. Seibel

Pittsburgh also has a Negro Drama League, which holds its third annual symposium this Sunday afternoon in the Center Avenue Y. M. C. A., with George M. P. Baird as guest speaker. Lynn V. Hooe is president and Althea E. Washington secretary of this organization, which is doing good work.

The next important production of local amateur groups will be "The Devil's Disciple," by Shaw, presented by Arnold S. Berke's Y Playhouse on Bellefield avenue. The first performance, Monday night, April 30, will be presented seriously in the modern manner; the second, May 2, will be in the Show Boat style of the ten-twenty-thirt melodrama. They ought to invite St. Bernard himself.

Up on the South Hills, Edward Blaine's Community Players are rehearsing Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan," their next production.

In East Pittsburgh the Westinghouse players will give "The Whole Town's Talking" on Saturday, May 5. In Ingram the Parent-Teacher Association is putting on "Three Taps at Twelve," staged by Mrs. Ola Rex Gordon, next Friday. School dramatics everywhere are flourishing—last night the Carrick High School sang "Pinafore" in celebration of the school's tenth anniversary. The senior class of St. John's Catholic Boys' High School are rehearsing "Little Women" as their annual play.

Meanwhile Shakespeare is being honored nightly at the Tech Little Theater by performances of "Henry IV, Part 2," with Franklin Heller as Falstaff. Both parts will be alternated during Shakespeare week; the poet's birthday, on Monday, will be observed with the usual ceremonies.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Few Master New Ball Army of Pitchers Used Drawn-Out Games Rule

No Sunday Bargains Here Helping College Athletes Girl Swimmers Ranked

That a good pitcher still is a good pitcher, regardless of the kind of ball in use, has been demonstrated already this season by some impressive slab feats, featured by Lonnie Warneke's close approach to a hitless game and his total of 13 strikeouts in nine innings. The hurlers of the two big leagues have turned in five shutouts, four one-run and four two-run performances. They have delivered a one-hit game, one of three hits, two of four hits, and seven of five hits.

Lonnie Warneke

But that's only one side of the story. The slabmen handling the 1934 bill so successfully have been in the minority, and evidence of the rabbity qualities of the uniform apple is contained in the fact that in the 29 games played up to today the clubs were forced to use no fewer than 117 pitchers, 29 home runs were poled, and only nine of the 29 contests were completed in less than two hours. Two games went beyond two hours and a half, two others beyond two hours and 20 minutes, and eight others beyond two hours and 10 minutes. Drawn-out games add another undesirable angle to big scores and burlesque slugging. Of course, it is much too early to pass judgment on the ball, but signs so far do not indicate that the kind of game it will bring in will be as popular as the type played in the National League last year.

STARTING TIME BARS SUNDAY DUAL BILLS

The fact that daylight saving time will be in force in Pittsburgh again this year means that in the city's first season of Sunday baseball the Pirates will have to confine their Sunday activities at Forbes Field to single games, and cannot attempt the playing of any double-headers on that day except in emergencies, when no other dates are available for postponed tilts.

To assure the running off of two full games in time to let patrons escape cold dinners, it has been customary to start all double-headers here at 1:45 p. m. Even on Eastern standard time, that would not be possible under Pennsylvania's Sunday sports law, which permits Sunday games only between the hours of 2 and 6 p. m Daylight saving time adds to the double-header difficulties, as only Eastern standard time is recognized in the statutes of the commonwealth, and "between 2 and 6 p. m." therefore will mean between 3 and 7 p. m, according to the time that will be in use here, starting on the date of the first Sunday game one week from tomorrow.

Sunday games cannot be started before 3 o'clock, daylight saving time, and cannot be extended beyond 7 o'clock. The players would have to step lively and the usual intermission would have to be reduced, to squeeze in two games of regular length in four hours, particularly with the rabbity ball threatening to prolong the proceedings. In addition, if the fans were kept at the park until as late as 7 o'clock it would mean cold dinners, interfere with evening engagements and make things inconvenient for out-of-town patrons in returning home. So there will be only single games at Forbes Field on Sundays, unless there is no way of avoiding double-headers on occasions.

SLADE TRIES NEW GRIP AS HITTING AID

The old baseball theory that hitters are born and cannot be made is on trial again this spring in the case of Gordon Slade, now playing shortstop for the Reds. Though an excellent fielder, Slade has been a bust as a batsman in his four National League seasons. Brooklyn tried him for three years, and he hit only .216, .239 and .240. Shifted to Columbus, he rose to .353, but when the Cards brought him back to the big show last season he dropped to .113. In a last desperate effort to transform himself into a hitter, Slade has now resorted to an unorthodox grip on the bat.

Gordon Slade

Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati's hard-hitting catcher, has been successful for some time with an interlocking grip, such as numerous golf players employ. Instead of merely placing one hand above the other on the bat, Lombardi, a right-hand swinger, slips the little finger of the right hand in between the first and second fingers of the left. As proof of the success of the method, he points to an average of .294 for three major campaigns. Ernie interested Slade in the unusual grip, which few players are able to use because of the strain it imposes on the wrists. Slade owns a strong pair of wrists, so he decided to try the new hold. On the training trip he got gratifying results with it, but doing the same in pennant competition may be a different matter.

HANLEY OUTSPOKEN ON HELPING ATHLETES

Pat Hanley, the new football coach at Boston University, is one gridiron mentor who does not hesitate to speak his mind to those persons who appear to consider it a crime to make possible a college education for a poor boy whose only capital is his athletic ability. There are limits, of course, and these may be, and often have been, disregarded to the point of making the practice an evil, but Hanley is frank enough to say that, within reasonable bounds, there is no good reason why a poor boy should not be helped along.

The Boston coach expresses the hope that his remarks will not be misinterpreted by those who view with suspicion everything about college athletics. What he has in mind is the placing of the boy on a job where he can earn his tuition, board and room. Hanley does not advocate subsidization, the false "jobs" and general laxity in the academic department. He just feels that an athlete, if he can meet the intellectual requirements of a college, though too poor to get an education unaided, is entitled to as much help as if he were not an athlete.

SEES OLYMPIC WIN FOR AMERICAN GIRLS

Eleanor Holm Jarrett, who knows a thing or two about international swimming standards and comparative rankings, predicts in no uncertain terms victory for the United States women's team in the next Olympic Games, and counts Lenore Kight, of Homestead, as one of the main hopes. She admits that foreign stars may defeat one or two of our girls, but feels sure Uncle Sam's entry will win the team championship.

Eleanor Holm Jarrett

Asked to pick America's foremost six women swimmers, Mrs. Jarrett named Lenore Kight, free style; Olive McKean, free style; Alice Bridges, backstroke and free style; Jane McSheehy, breaststroke; Anne Govednik, breaststroke, and little Katherine Rawls, "who can do anything." The former Miss Holm explained she did not mean they should be ranked in the order named, and when reminded that she had forgotten herself, she added, "Well, you can make it seven and include me." As to the best six women swimmers in the world, she said she would stick by her American list, with the addition of Willemijnte Den Ouden, the Dutch girl.

PITT TRACKERS FACE TEMPLE STARS TODAY

By JESS CARVER

It may be lilac time somewhere, but its track season in Pittsburgh, said season being ushered in formally today by the varsity squads of Pitt and Temple, which engage in a dual meet in the Pitt Stadium.

In a meet of lesser importance, Carnegie Tech's varsity takes on the P. A. A. squad in the practice meet indulged in annually by the Tartans and winged headers. This meet is slated for the Tech Bowl.

Pitt's swimmers, golfers and netters also are billed for action today, while the footballers will hardly have a day of rest, what with a spring practice session game listed for behind the closely barred gates of the practice field. The netters meet Grove City, the golfers take on Detroit University and the swimmers are assisting at the annual swimming clinic in Trees gynasium pool.

TEMPLE FAVORITE

Pitt downed Temple a year ago in a dual meet, the first ever staged between athletes of the institutions, in Philadelphia. The chances of the Panthers repeating today are not considered overly hot. Temple has the strongest team it has boasted for six years, and while Pitt has balance and one or two outstanding performers, the local boys do not appear to be within seven or eight points of the Owls.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A NOVEL MOUTH—Ignacio Cortez, an electrician, of Santiago de Chile, came in contact with the high tension wires of the local electric plant where he was working. Three thousand volts hurled Cortez, horribly convulsed, to the floor. The doctors diagnosed his case as hopeless. In addition to the electric shock, he had contracted pneumonia and broken five ribs. An operation was performed with a local anaesthetic and proved successful. The opening made by the doctors under his right arm never healed. It now serves Cortez as a mouth, through which he breathes, smokes and talks. His miraculous recovery, according to the doctors, is due to this transformation. BAM BAM HOBBLES—The women of the Ibo tribe in Nigeria wear large metal plate anklets which make it necessary for each leg to do a complete semi-circle to get in front of the other. Although it makes walking very difficult, as the "bam-bams" compel the wearer to waddle painfully, they are proud of these ornaments, which represent their value in the marriage market.

TOMORROW: THE TSAR CANNON.

Coulon, Ex-Champ, Beats Bobby O'Dowd

CHICAGO, April 21.—(INS.)—Johnny Coulon, who ruled the world bantamweight two decades ago, proved last night that he can still hold his own with the youngsters.

Coulon went three rounds in an exhibition match with Bobby O'Dowd before 1,200 persons at the Rainbo Fronton and managed to outbox the 24-year-old Iowan. The former champion finished strong. Coulon weighed 114, O'Dowd, 113.

Mose Butch Stops Gilligan in Seventh

SALEM, O., April 21—Mose Butch, of Pittsburgh, was too tough a customer for Jimmy Gilligan, of Toronto, O., here last night, the Pittsburgh southpaw featherweight stopping Gilligan in the seventh round of the scheduled 10-round bout.

Harry Krause, also of Pittsburgh, who only recently turned pro, defeated Lou Rice, of Canton, in a four rounder and Ray Eberle, of South Heights, Pa., making his pro debut, drew with Tom McKenzie, of Canton, in 8 rounds.

CINCINNATI, April 21.—A long stay on the welcome earth of Forbes Field beckoned the Buccos today as they prepared for their first clash of the season with the Reds. Pittsburgh and the Oakland orchard will shelter the Pirates for the better part of a month after they leave Cincinnati tomorrow night at the conclusion of their initial series with Bob O'Farrell's team.

Beginning with the home opener carded for Tuesday next, the Bucs will show off on the home lot right through May 16.

Bill Swift is ararin' to go in today's clash with the Rhinelanders. The big Scranton boy who threw back the Reds in their opener one year ago was among those rained out yesterday, but Bill thinks he will be just as effective today as he would have been had there been a contest yesterday when cold weather forced a cancellation of the diamond sport.

BENTON TO HURL

Manager O'Farrell is said to have Larry Benton all ready to toss at the Bucs this afternoon, although the Pirates would not be surprised were they called upon to look at the speedy slants of the youthful Si Johnson, who lost the opening tussle with the Cubs. Redland fans would relish the appearance on the slab of Red Lucas, but the sorrel top, now wearing Pirate regalia, may be unable to fling on account of an ailing hip. If Red doesn't flip the sphere here he may be honored by working in the home opener against the Cardinals Tuesday.

The enforced day of idleness did not seem to bother the Pirates. The Buccos were keen for action yesterday, inasmuch as they were big favorites to down the home team.

The fine showing of the Buccos in the opening series with the Cardinals boosted the stock of the Pirates all over the league. The Gibson clan had to show a lot of courage and class to cop two out of three from the Red Birds after dropping the inaugural.

CHILLYSAUCE

Adam Comorosky stepped into the Pirate group and gave his old-time buddies several big laughs before he departed. Commy is regarded by the Bucs as one of the most popular Pirates of the last decade, so far as the players are concerned. His good nature is as genuine as Rabbit Maranville's.

Commy said he was downhearted for a couple of hours after he had ruined Lonnie Warneke's no-hit game, a trick performed by the Polish flyer with one out in the ninth inning. But after he realized he did what every honest person should do, he thought better of the situation. He said:

"Warneke was great in his spirit after the contest was over. Lonnie hunted me up and complimented me for making the single."

Somebody in the Pirate camp recalled that the Pirates made eight runs after two were out in the ninth to defeat the Redbirds in a contest of the opening series in St. Louis one year ago, which goes to prove that a batter ought always to do his best at the plate. After all, what is more important, the winning of a game, or a no-hit game for a pitcher? Baseball is not an individual proposition.

Starting with the home opener featuring the Cardinals Tuesday afternoon, the Pirates will stage no less than 21 unbroken contests at Forbes Field. The game slated for one week from Sunday with the Reds will be the first Sunday contest in Pittsburgh's baseball history. The long stay at home will be concluded May 16 with an exhibition game between the Buccos and Detroit Tigers. The Pirates will then leave on their first eastern trip.

PRACTICE CARDED

The J. J. Vaughans, of the City League will host a practice session at Phipps Playgrounds at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Harp Vaughan wants any player of City League caliber to report for practice.

DODGER ROOKIES SHOW REAL PROMISE IN EARLY BATTLES

KID PITCHER BLANKS PHILS; GIANTS COP

Associated Press.

When Casey Stengel, new manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, admitted this spring he intended to build for the future, the boys from Flatbush figured that was just one way of admitting the Dodgers had little to hope for in 1934. Early performances at Ebbets Field, however, look as if someone already had done a little building with the current season in mind.

Emil Leonard, a knuckleball hurler who came up from York, Pa., late last season, and Len Koenecke, known as the "$75,000 bust" when he failed to make good with the Giants a few years ago, got into the lineup almost by accident. But they did enough in one game yesterday to justify their being kept around a while.

ROOKIE BLANKS PHILS

Leonard, named as a starting pitcher because Ray Benge failed to round into condition soon enough, shut out the Phillies with six hits to win his first start, 5 to 0, gave only one walk and contributed a double to his own victory. Koenecke, posted in center field when Danny Taylor was injured, rapped Ed Holley and Ted Kleinhans for two homers and a pair of singles that accounted for four Dodger runs.

The New York Giants continued their unbroken string of triumphs in the only other National League game which survived yesterday's chilly weather. Scoring in two big innings on a combination of hard and "heavy" hitting, they trimmed the Braves, 7 to 3, for their fourth straight victory. A homer by Mel Ott started them off on a three-run burst in the second, then after the Braves had tied the count with the aid of a four-bagger by Marty McManus, they crossed up Pitcher Ben Cantwell with a couple of bunts and staged a four-run rally that won the game in the sixth.

DETROIT WINS

Detroit and Cleveland furnished the feature of the two-game American League program with a mound duel between Carl Fischer and Lloyd Brown, which wound up abruptly in the ninth with Detroit the 4-0 victor. After eight scoreless innings the Tigers loaded the bases and Marvin Owen promptly unloaded them with a double, took third on the throw to the plate and squeezed home on Fischer's sacrifice. The Tiger southpaw granted only five hits.

Washington's mound staff again failed and the Athletics slugged out a 9-to-6 decision for the Senators' third straight defeat. The A's wound up with 15 hits against four flingers, plenty to win even though Washington collected 12.

AMATEURS GET K.O. WINS

A brace of technical knockouts, one coming in the first and the other in the second round, featured the benefit amateur boxing show staged in the South Side Market House last night by the Brashear Settlement A. C. The summary:

Rain Cuts Short Mason-Dixon Play

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 21.—(AP.)—Combatting the weather as well as one another, tennis luminaries approached the finale of the fourteenth annual Mason and Dixon tournament today with the men's singles finalists yet to be determined.

With a better break from the weather man, tournament officials hoped to be able to complete the semi-finals, pitting Frank Shields against Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, and Lester Stoefen against Bryan Grant in time to allow the playing of the final round late this afternoon.

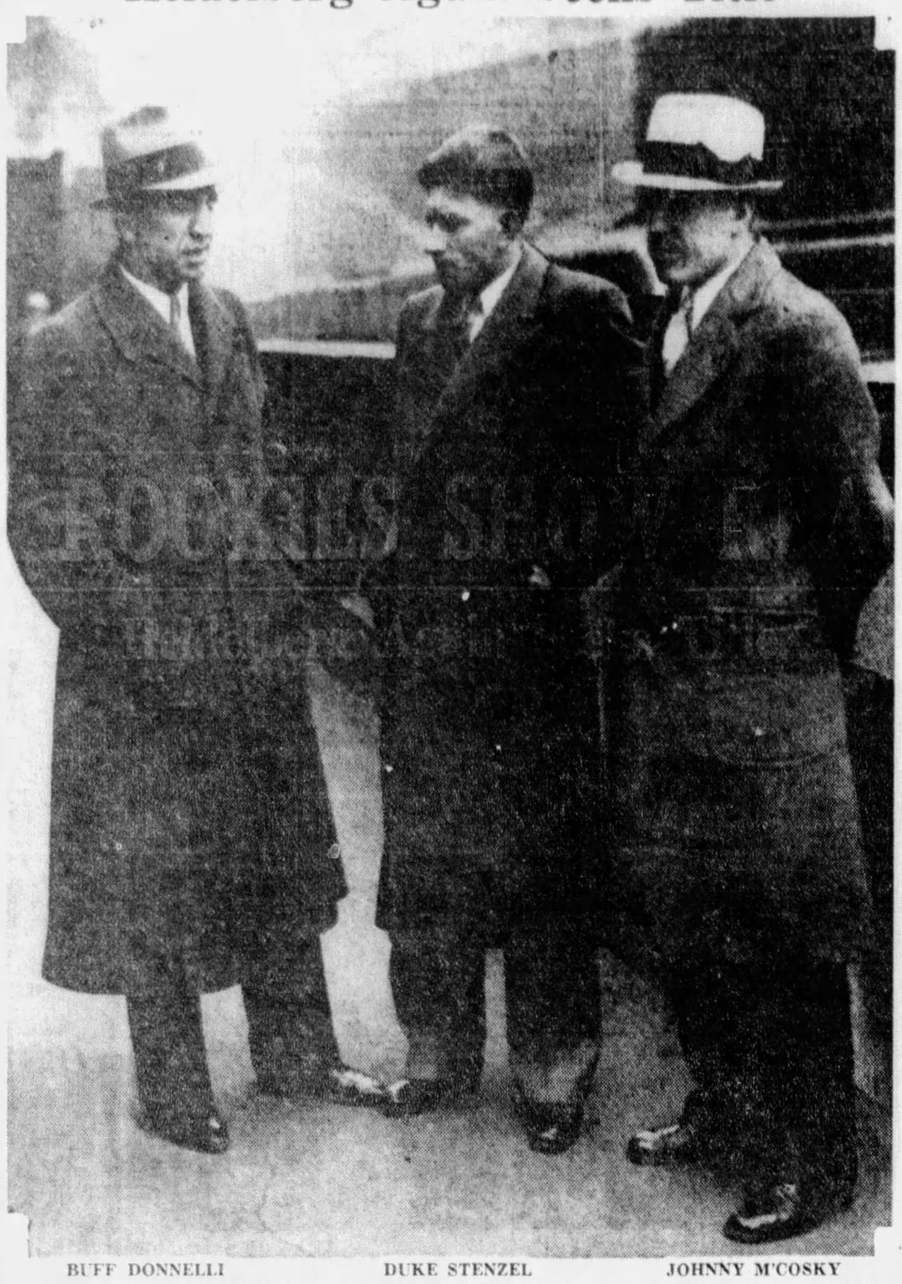
Heidelberg Again Seeks Title



BUFF DONNELLI DUKE STENZEL JOHNNY M'COSKY

Donnelli, former star of the Heidelberg soccer team, bids old teammates goodbye as they leave for Philadelphia to meet the German-American team of that city in the final round for the national amateur soccer title today. Back in 1930, Buff and Johnny and Duke collaborated in bringing the championship here, beating Newark in the final round. Buff is the present freshman football and floor coach at Duquesne University. PITT GOLFERS FACE DETROIT

By TOM BIRKS

The University of Pittsburgh inaugurated the 1934 collegiate golf season today when it tangled with the golf team of the University of Detroit over the St. Clair Country Club course.

The Panther squad, with Regis Wolff at No. 1, again looms as a formidable aggregation. Art Sekay, last year's captain, has graduated, but the Panthers apparently have plenty of material to make their prospects for a successful season very rosy.

The usual sweepstakes events will be held at the district country clubs today. A special event is being held at the Summit Club at Uniontown.

Johnny Capebianco, golf pro at the Aliquippa Country Club, has been admitted to the Professional Golfers' Association of America and to the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association. He has been notified of his admission to membership in the two organizations by Dave McKay, secretary.

California Crews Win Over U. C. L. A.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 21.—(AP.)—University of California's varsity and junior varsity crews defeated University of California at Los Angeles in easy fashion yesterday in races on Oakland estuary.

The Bear varsity cleaned up by six lengths in the two-mile race in 10:30. In the 2,000-meter junior varsity race, the Bear oarsmen took command early in the going and crossed the finish line with a three and one-half length lead.

The scholastic baseball nines, W. P. I. A. L. brand, continued their chase for title honors yesterday as the schoolboy golfers inaugurated the 1934 conference campaign.

The baseball program was featured by the continued heavy hitting of the crack Dormont High School nine, which piled up an even dozen hits and 16 runs to beat Bridgeville, 16 to 1. Three Dormont hurlers limited Bridgeville to four scattered hits.

Trinity High, of Washington, Pa., defending champion, was held to a 5-5 deadlock in a seven-inning game by Waynesburg. A three-run rally in the sixth inning enabled Trinity to knot the count.

In other games, Turtle Creek Union won a slugfest from McKeesport, 12 to 8; Crafton nosed out Cecil, 8 to 6, and Avella and Hickory staged another tie at Avella, 6-6.

Aside from two close duels in Section I of the interscholastic golf conference, the winning squads banged out desisive triumphs. Kiski, opening the defense of the title it won last year, crushed Latrobe, 14½ to ½. Two teams scored shutouts, Peabody blanking Westinghouse, 15 to 0, and Turtle Creek treating Mt. Lebanon in the same fashion.

In the closest matches of the day, Allegheny vocational nosed out Mt. Oliver, 8 to 7, and Connelly won over Taylor Allderdice by a like score. Yesterday's results follow:

U. S. Walker Cup Team Sails Today

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP.)—Their trunks loaded down and packed with a supply of long woolen underwear to protect them against the fierce and biting gales at St. Andrews, the nine American amateur golfers comprising the U. S. Walker Cup team were guests last night at a farewell dinner and theater party, preparatory to sailing today for Scotland.

The tardiness of Francis Ouimet, the team captain, in reporting to the United States Golf Association headquarters for his passport and other credentials caused some concern among association officials.

Fairmont Tossers Win Over W. Va.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 21.—Fairmont State Teachers College rallied in the sixth inning to score three runs and beat West Virginia University, 5-4, yesterday to extend a jinx into 1934. Last year they beat the Mountaineers three times.

Fairmont used three twirlers, the last, Fox, pounding out a single in the sixth to bring home the tying and winning runs.

HAWK PILOT QUITS

CHICAGO, April 21.—(INS.)—Tommy Gorman, manager of the world champion Black Hawk hockey team, has tendered his resignation to Maj. HEIDELBERG MAKES TITLE BID TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—The Heidelberg eleven makes a bid for its third national amateur soccer championship here this afternoon as it meets the Philadelphia German-American Club at Rifle Field, in the final round of the national tourney.

Heidelberg left Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon and arrived here last night.

BOWLING STAR SHOWS WARES

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI

Andy Varipapa, "trick shot" bowling star, of New York, gave an exhibition of his skill in this locality yesterday, taking part in a total of 16 matches and winning 13 of them. In eight games at the Keystone A. C., he averaged 216, defeating every bowler he met except Ralph Thomas, who defeated him, 224 to 205. Varipapa then turned the tables with a 215 to 179 victory.

He downed Val Meyer, 187 to 182, in the first match and then defeated Val, 247 to 168. After the Thomas matches, he took on Walter E. Bisler, winning, 219 to 179 and 223 to 197. John Verdi was beaten, 236 to 224, in a thrilling match and then 193 to 170.

'EKKIE' MAKES START TODAY

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP.)—The big shots of the turf will swing into action on three fronts today with C. V. Whitney's famous Equipoise making his 1934 debut in the $7,500 Philadelphia handicap at Havre De Grace; Norman Church's Riskulus meeting 11 other 3-year-olds in the $10,000 Texas Derby at Arlington Downs, and 12 high-class sprinters matching strides in the Paumonok handicap at the opening of the New York season at Jamaica.

The Texas Derby will do much to determine Riskulus' ability to match strides with the country's best in the Kentucky Derby. The Jamaica opening will mark the return of legal betting to the Empire State for the first time in 26 years.

But the big race of the day will be in Maryland, with Equipoise resuming a campaign designed to pass Sun Beau's money winning record of $376,244 before the end of the year. The little chestnut, now fourth on the list of earnings with $322,970, can top Gallant Fox with a victory in the 1 1-16-mile jaunt, which he won last year.

As usual "Ekkie" has been assigned top weight. He will pick up 130 pounds and give 13 to 26 pounds to his seven rivals.

PITT NETTERS OPEN SEASON

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The Pitt Panther tennis squad pops the lid off the district intercollegiate net campaign this afternoon by invading Mercer County for clash with Bob Thorn's hustling Grove City crew. In addition to opening the outdoor competitive season, the Blue and Gold lads will be staging their debut under the tutelage of Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and first ranking racqueter of Western Pennsylvania, and under the captaincy of Nat Ganger, crack Cleveland performer, who begins his third and final spring beneath the Golden Cat banner.

The Pittsburghers embark upon their inaugural with but two or three real practice sessions to their credit; whether or not the Grovers have had any workouts whatever is not known here. The makeup of the local squad remained undertermined until last evening, when Dr. O'Loughlin stated that Capt. Ganger will start at No. 1, with Jim Slocum, hard-hitting veteran; Joe Madden, promising Schenley Heights sophomore; Jim Thompson, Allderdice High product; Norton, a talented darkhorse, and Roy Heckler, Crafton protege of Art Glaser, following on the singles list in the order named.

Ganger and Madden will be paired at the top doubles, Thompson and Norton are aligned second, and Slocum joins Heckler to bring up the rear.

The Duquesne-Waynesburg contest, billed to begin home hostilities on the Bluff on Monday, has been adjourned to a later date at the request of the Yellow Jackets. Duquesne aspirants will thus have till Wednesday when they encounter Carnegie Tech on the Hilltop, to condition themselves for festivities.

JOEY BAZZONE AND RANDALL REMATCHED

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Tiger Joe Randall and Joey Bazzone will have it out again. The stars of the recent battle of many knockdowns in McKeesport have been rematched by Promoter Jim McGirr to clash on Monday, April 30.

The first Randall-Bazzone bout was one of the hardest fought ever seen in McKeesport and was a natural for a rematch, with one judge voting for Bazzone, one for a draw and the referee for Randall, which made the latter the official winner. In order to land the bout, McGirr had to guarantee Randall $400, which is a lot of money for a bout in a town of that size these days. Bazzone will receive 22 per cent.

Dominic Mancini, local lightweight, will box Jimmy Vaughn, of Cleveland, in the 10-round semi-final to the Ben Jeby-Anson Green fight at Motor Square Garden next Friday night, Matchmaker Lew Raymond announced today.

Mose Butch will box Charley Burns at Johnstown, May 3, with Sammy Paris and Joey Adams booked for one of the supporting bouts.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS!

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

'This Thing Called Love' Proves to Be Puzzle

"What is this thing called lo-o-o-ve . . .

"Called lo-o-o-ve?"

That is how it came in to me over the radio. The question sung forcefully at first, and dying away to an overprolonging of the last word. As if the singer's mouth was all in a pucker, and he was trying to say "prunes."

But it wasn't breakfast time. It was love time. I was reading a detective thriller . . and yet how could I concentrate.

Miss Brunot

"What is this thing called lo-o-o-ve?"

It was beating into my ear drums and blurring the purple and yellow striped pajamas of the star detective and getting me mixed as to whether it was the third or only the second poisoning. This thing called love was more inevitable, more assured than all the tramping Cains.

"Turn on the radio," I asked. (That was one way to get rid of the question.)

"I like it," and the little girl with light hair flying sat still. Evidently the query was sweet to her tender years. Oh, yes. I was saying: "What is this thing called love?" And what is it? Have you experienced it? Have I. Has the other fellow?

Was it a fine make-believe we went through in that day in June long ago? Or wasn't it anything near to love at all. Were we merely suffering from an overdose of ego?

Have we trailed through the years unloved? People fearing rather than caring. Admiring rather than emotionally upset over us?

Has this thing called love come lightly tip-toeing up to us, and have we laughed in its face. Were we too busy polishing brass. Or too much occupied in counting figures.

DON'T KNOW 'LOVE'

Have we caught on to the very end of a little of this star dust, and have we seen it vanish, fast as the clouds change about the setting sun?

I'll catch someone napping. And ask him what this thing love is? There is the letter carrier down the street. Brown mailbag with him, and his shoes flat-heeled and his elbows growing sharp in their continual angle.

I'll ask him. What will he say?

"I don't know, ma'am. The government employs me. I do my duty."

"But LOVE? That isn't a job," I argue.

"Yet I carry many love letters. If you could but read through some of these envelopes you'd find out."

"That's love at a distance," I explained.

Then I asked the driver of a truck. He was young, and his cheeks were red, and he was on his way out into the country, where buds are shaping themselves on the bushes and the ground looks as if there was something about to happen that will change the whole drear world.

"Love," said he as he spat out his chewing gum, "Oh, love?" He scratched his hair under his cap, grinned and added, "I dunno, ma'am."

I saw an old man, with a book under his arm, and his skin was sallow and the lobes of his ears hung low. But I didn't ask him. I was afraid of his answer.

So back to the chair and the detective story, and the radio. Let the melody sing out ever so long. Let it prolong itself in the air until somebody wiser than I, answer . . .

"What is this thing called lo--o--ve . . ."

Do you know? Or is it war time in Germany. And do you use substitutes?

PARENTS OBJECT

Desperate Dot writes me. She says:

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a daily reader of your column, and since you have helped some of my friends, I am going to tell you about myself. I am a girl of 15 years, and my parents treat me as if I were 5. They are always ding-donging into my ears that the friends I pick are no good. For instance, I have been seeing a lot of a certain young man 20 years of age. My parents say he is too old, and not a fit person for me. But really he is a lot nicer than some of the others I have gone with. I tell my parents I am old enough to choose my own company. But they do not think so. Now I love this fellow. What shall I do?

I will be looking for your answer, and thank you, Miss Brunot. DESPERATE DOT.

I do not imagine you are as desperate as your signature indicates. For, Dot, I am going to say I find it quite necessary to agree with your parents in thinking a young man of 20 too old for a girl of 15. Not that 20 is OLD. But rather that 15 is so VERY YOUNG. Your love troubles now no doubt seem very real to you. But then, Dot, are they? You must still be in school. You scarcely have your life work planned. Your parents still need you. There is so much fun and experience ahead before you settle down to a real beau. Don't you agree? Just try giving up this older fellow, and see how soon your mind as well as heart are filled with other thought than of him.

I think it is something to be grateful for, that your parents are so interested in your welfare. You will agree with me, some day. See if you don't.

MISS AMERICA SEES WASHINGTON, D. C.—NO. 2

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Sally, Sue and Sylvia got their fresh young selves into their second best frocks (the first best, the most beautiful in a chic way, are saved for the miracle that MIGHT happen—tea at the White House—for you never can tell, if you are young and hopeful!) their second best, as we said, the morning after they arrived in the city that is a country in itself, and went immediately to do honor to the famous Washington Scene, Washington showing immaculately through the enchantment of the cherry trees!

What child has not known about the fame and beauty of them in April, next in beauty to the dome of the Capitol, and in fame, to the father of his country himself? Sally and Sue knew. So they linked up arms with Sylvia, and walked the circle of the lagoon.

Blue lagoon, blue sky, wooled with idle white clouds. The sugar-white shaft of the Washington Monument reared against the blue above the snow of the cherry blossoms. "Five hundred and fifty-five feet high," chanted Sylvia, who knows her Washington, "and made of just countless blocks of pure white stone! Finished in 1844."

And Sue and Sally listen, breathe the gentle air, look across to the wooded stretches of historic and romantic Virginia—and are glad they are here.

"And these perfectly gorgeous cherry trees—maybe you don't know it, seeing that you are a couple of light-headed, light-minded young things—were given, three thousand of them, if you please, by Tokio to Washington as a graceful gift of good-will. In 1912, I think—22 years ago. You were not even in the land of the living, Sue; and you, Sally, were still on an exclusive diet of orange juice and a bit of cereal! Oh, aren't they lovely !"

But Sue and Sally, though a listening world would believe the "light-minded" label, have seeing eyes and sensitive souls, and Washington is already beautiful to them, at her very doorway. For their first day is spent in her enchanted woods. The dark, wine-brown satin boles of the trees hold up a bewildering cloud of drifting bloom. And beneath their flowering shade, through flecks of sun-blue shadow, come two very little people to finish the picture and people their atmosphere—the Japanese Ambassador Katsuji Debuchi and his beautiful wife!

He, in his severe American clothes, smiling. She, ebony-haired, with figure like a child and a face from some delicate old Japanese print, in her soft-tinted, plain kimono with its brighter obi.

Sally and Sue and Sylvia stride on, and try not to stare. But their hearts are going pit-a-pat. Their first Ambassador and Ambassadress! —NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Best Man Doesn't Pay

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

1—Is it proper to serve cocktails to guests in the living-room directly from the cocktail shaker?

2—Shall all side dishes like tomatoes, corn and so forth be eaten with fork?

3—What expenses has the best man at a wedding? A.

1—Yes.

2—Yes. But, if possible, it is far better form not to use side dishes for the serving of vegetables. Vegetables such as tomatoes, corn, peas, string beans, and so forth, should be served directly to the plate on which the meat is served. "Side dishes" have, in the main, gone out of fashion!

3—The best man is not supposed to have any expenses at a wedding. Naturally he, like other close friends, gives a wedding present, but this is all.

Greet Them First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am expecting to attend a university year dance soon, I would like very much to know how to greet the patrons and patronesses. INTERESTED.

First remember that the important point is to greet the patronesses and patrons first. That is, before you greet the other guests that you know. I call attention to this, for I have so often seen girls and boys and women and men, enter an assembly of this kind where there were patrons and patronesses, and greet many friends before they causually sauntered up to the women and men who should have, because of their honored position on the occasion, been greeted first.

Every patroness and patron will offer the hand as the greeting is given, and you shake hands and say, "How do you do Mrs. Thomas." Then, if there is time for some comment, say something about the charm of the occasion, or how happy you are to be there, or what a happy group of guests is there, or how beautiful the decorations are, or even something about the weather, for this subject isn't such a taboo subject as one would think from the jokes made about it as a conversational topic.

If you do not know the patroness or patron, give your name, very distinctly, as you greet her or him. Offering your hand, you say, "I am Gertrude Allen." And then the greeting follows, as I have suggested above.

Household Hints

To freshen vegetables soak them for an hour in cold water to which the juice of a lemon has been added.

Red tiled floors will have a deeper and richer color if a little paraffin is added to the water with which they are washed.

It pays to take care of a good mirror, and it is as well sometimes to remove the thin boards which cover the back, so that dust may be removed. If, however, the mirror is very neatly finished off at the back this may not be essential. A good mirror should be resilvered, when necessary, by an expert.

Potatoes that are cooked before they are needed can be kept hot and in good condition if the water is strained off without shaking, and a clean folded linen cloth placed firmly over the saucepan. Put in a warm place until the rest of the dinner is ready, then remove the cloth and shake the potatoes well over a low burner.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Unusual Bidding Situation

The experts who love to gather in the experts' room at a New York club frequently develop bids that to the less informed look little short of miraculous but which, on the contrary, are founded on the soundest of logic.

In a recent session there Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Samuel Frey, Jr., were seated North and South respectively when the hands below were dealt by West, also a nationally known expert.

West—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

♠ K Q 9 8 6 4
♡ A Q J 5 3
♣ 6 2

North / West / East / South

♠ A
♡ K 8 6 4 2
◇ K 7
♣ A K J 7 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ◇ (1)	Double (2)	4 ◇ (3)	5 ◇ (4)
Pass	6 ◇ (5)	Pass	7 ♡ (6)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—An endeavor to "steal" the hand if possible. West, as it afterwards developed, had seven diamonds to 100 honors.

2—Mr. von Zedwitz rightly prefers to double rather than bid three or four hearts or three or four spades. He does not know which of his suits, if either, will fit his partner's hand.

3—A very fine defensive bid.

4—A brilliant bid, showing a very strong hand opposite a Takeout Double.

5—An equally brilliant bid as it precludes the possibility of playing the hand at six clubs and hence makes easier Mr. Fry's final bid.

6—It is apparent to Mr. Fry that North cannot be expecting him to bid seven clubs and a bid of six hearts now would be entirely inadequate—hence the Grand Slam bid in hearts, the first time the suit is mentioned.

The contract was, of course, made without the slightest difficulty. In fact the only thing that could have defeated it would have been to find East void of the suit opened by his partner.

A Child's Illusions

By LISA GRENELLE

"God save the king." For centuries loyal subjects have repeated it, not only with their tongues but in their hearts. Whether cruel or kind, selfish or magnanimous, the king could do no wrong in the eyes of his trusting, loyal subjects.

And so it is with our children. "God save the king; the king can do no wrong," expresses the child's first attitude toward his parents, even toward his relatives. He cannot bear to have his "own" criticized. So loyal is he that often he will risk any personal hurt in their defense in order, too, to keep them pedestaled in his own heart.

A little absurd, this blind loyalty may seem to adults, especially when a child's worship has been partially or temporarily turned to an outsider—a movie queen, a circus rider, the little girl next door. But foolish and unwarranted though this hero worship of these things. The child's attitude is not futile or foolish. It is evidence of a beautiful loyalty—a very necessary spoke in the wheel of his development.

This desire to worship—to have something to be proud of and to be worthy of—is a fine and essential instinct of every normal child. And it is a poor and insensitive child indeed that has not sufficient imagination to see what he wants to see in mother, father, the little girl next door or any other object of his hero worship.

It is a long time before a child's tender emotional nature can stand facing reality in the raw. Perhaps it never should, altogether. After all, it is the poets and the idealists who have always made the world go forward. At any rate it is both cruel and dangerous to disillusion a child too abruptly.

If his hero is unworthy of his admiration, let him find it out for himself in due course.

Don't commiserate with him, either, when he finds out himself that he has made an unwise choice. Say nothing, but let him feel that you understand his pain and mourn as sincerely as he the passing of so fine an illusion.

Respect the ideals, the loyalties, of your child, foolish though they may appear. Never laugh at his childish crushes. What does the object or the method matter? He is on the right track, reaching for a star. If it is but a tinsel one, still it requires a healthy stretch and an upward look to reach for it.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Finds Two Bullets Struck Victim

With a poignant pang of sympathy, I recognized a note of something closely resembling terror in Dicky's voice, as he put his query to the physician. But there was more than recognition in that sympathetic thrill. There was comprehension of his reason for the question, and I involuntarily leaned forward in breathless anxiety to hear the answer.

Did the physician hesitate? I was not sure, so short an interval elapsed between Dicky's question and his answer.

"I do not think so," he said. "But it came very near it—so near that it may have grazed it."

The color ebbed from Dicky's face again.

"D—n it, man, you'd better be sure," he said. "That's my drawing arm, you know."

The physician started perceptibly.

"By jove, that's so," he said. "I had forgotten about your being Graham, the artist."

In his voice there was the peculiar intonation, composed of one part deferential respect and two parts ironic, amused wonder, with which people out side the professions usually speak of those who earn their bread and jam as authors or artists.

"Yes, I happen to be that unfortunate person," Dicky said irritably. "But that isn't the question. What I want to know is what you mean by 'just grazing'? Will the ligament be hurt in the least?"

TWO WOUNDS

Again I heard that sharpened note of terror, and I wondered if he felt, as I did, that the physician was suspiciously hesitant in answering.

"I do not think you need have any fear on that score," the doctor said, after a second. "But just to satisfy yourself, why don't you let me take you over to the hospital for a day or two? I can make only a cursory examination here. There, you can know very quickly just what damage has been done, if any. I am confident you will find these are only flesh wounds."

"These" Hugh Grantland echoed. "Was there more than one wound?"

"Yes, two," the physician replied laconically.

"And a low average it was, too," Dicky commented. "The beggar fired six times at me."

Hugh evidently had been watching me, for my searching eyes found his instantly, and into them came an intent look which spelled a distinct message to me. Then he gave a little nod, almost imperceptible, but which brought infinite comfort and reassurance to me.

"If you wish to go to the hospital," he turned to Dicky, "I wish you would go in my car. There is room enough in it for both the chief and me beside you."

"Why, thank you, old chap," Dicky said, and I was afraid I detected in his voice a note of constraint, indicating the reluctance with which he usually receives any proffer of aid from Hugh. "But that seems unnecessary, if the doctor has his car here, ready to give me a lift."

"Do you think we are going to let you go alone, my boy?" my father demanded affectionately, and Dicky gave him the smile with which he always greets "the chief."

"I surely don't want to drag you away from home at this hour, sir," he said.

"Just let me be the judge of that," my father returned. And then he turned to the young hysician, with the authoritative air he knows so well how to assume.

GOING TO HOSPITAL

"Is your car a large one?" he asked.

"No, only a runabout."

"Then I am sure you will agree with me," my father went on suavely, "that it would be far better for my son-in-law to go with Major Grantland and myself in the major's big car, than in a runabout with you, where there would be little room for him. Of course, we will take Mrs. Bickett with us, if she will go"—he made a courtly bow in Katherine's direction—"and she will remain at the hospital until Mr. Graham returns home."

Katherine spoke one word to me in an undertone.

"Faith?" she said.

"All right," I returned emhatically, in equally low tones, and Katherine turned her eyes to my father's face.

"I shall be glad to go," she said simply. "I'll get my patient ready for moving right away."

But my husband put out a protesting hand.

"What about Madge?" he demanded.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Periodical 'Check-Up' on Health

Bright's Disease and other serious disturbances of the kidney are not as frequently encountered as they were a century ago. But it is amazing to learn the number of persons afflicted with kidney disorders.

Dr. Copeland.

I venture to say that in most instances the sufferer from kidney trouble was unaware of its existence until he was well beyond middle life. This fact can be traced to negligence, particularly the lack of periodic urinalysis.

No one will deny that the early discovery of an inflammatory condition of the kidney is of vital importance. When the disorder is recognized in its early stages, and proper diet and necessary measures are enforced, cure is possible in most cases. It is only when the disease is neglected or overlooked that permanent and serious changes occur in the kidneys.

These ailments in their serious forms can be prevented by periodic examinations of the urine. No doubt the value of these tests is brought home to you when you are examined for life insurance. All insurance companies insist upon a complete urinalysis on the part of every applicant. An insurance policy will not be issued if the urine gives evidence of kidney trouble.

A careful unrinalysis gives information concerning the functioning of the kidney. It may give hints concerning other vital organs of the body, such as the heart, lungs, liver and blood vessels. It is an important part of every physical examination incomplete if the urine is not subjected to various tests.

Contrary to a common belief diabetes is not a disease of the kidneys. It is a disorder of the pancreas, the "sweet breads," as we call that organ. But the existence of diabetes is often revealed by a urinalysis. In other words, though the patient did not suspect he had diabetes and had no marked symptoms of this disorder, the examination of his urine showed the presence of sugar.

The early recognition of diabetes means saving the patient from a great deal of discomfort. Usually, restriction of diet and enforcement of certain rules will be sufficient to remove the disturbance.

Another advantage of the periodic tests I mention is that they serve as an accurate index of the purpose of certain disorders. Repeated tests will show improvement or lack of improvement. This will influence the treatment and care of the sufferer.

If you have not recently consulted a physician do so now. Make sure that you report to him with a specimen of your urine. This should be collected over a period of 24 hours, and the total amount of urine should be calculated. I cannot overstate the importance of periodic urinalysis.

STOCK MARKET TREND SHADE IRREGULAR

NEW YORK CLOSE WITH NET CHANGES

PLATE GLASS MAKES NEW TOP HERE

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP.)—Stocks were a shade irregular in the first hour today. Trading started fairly brisk but activity dwindled ilated. Fluctuations were generally confined to fractions. Aside a mild display of firmness by steel shares at the opening, the list was without feature.

Auburn, a recent heavy spot, continued to sell lower. Fractional recessions were registered by Aviation Corporation, American Can, United States Smelting and American Telephone. Columbian Carbon rose more than 2 points. Shares steady to a bit higher included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas, United Aircraft and General Motors.

Building operations throughout the country were being watched closely by industrial observers for confirmation of the movement toward recovery.

During the week of April 13, the Engineering News-Record reported, total contract awards reached $32,248,000, the second highest amount for the year to date. It was pointed out, however, that prospects for the near future were chiefly dependent upon the willingness of state and municipal bodies to go ahead with long-delayed public work projects.

With the recent sharp decline of the dollar in terms of European gold currencies, banking circles were wondering if the Treasury will permit shipments of the metal to countries whose currencies rise to the point where importing will be profitable. Since the revaluation of the dollar this country has received a huge amount of foreign gold. Whether Washington would look with favor upon returning some of this treasure was a matter of considerable discussion.

While the British pound reacted a cent to $5.16 3/4 in opening dealings, the French franc moved up .01 1/4 of a cent to 6.58 cents. Its parity is about 6.63 cents. The gold export point for the franc is around 6.69 cents.

STOCKS OF OIL DECREASE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended April 14 totaled 341,922,000 barrels, a decrease of 44,000 barrels from the total of 341,966,000 barrels on hand at the end of the preceding week, Administrator Ickes announced.

This increase, which follows an increase of 603,000 barrels during the previous week, comprised an increase in stocks of domestic crude oil amounting to 155,000 barrels and a decrease in stocks of foreign crude oil of 199,000 barrels.

Current reports of the industry indicate that both crude oil production and runs to stills increased materially during the week ended April 14, as compared with the preceding week, but that imports of crude oil decreased materially. The approximate daily average balance of crude oil during the week ended April 14 was as follows (barrels): Production, 2,500,000; imports, 60,000; decrease in stocks, 6,000, equal runs to stills, 2,490,000 barrels; exports, fuel, losses, etc., 75,000.

GRAIN MARKET ADVANCES

CHICAGO, April 21.—Material upturns in grain values distinguished early trading today. Report of dust storms in North Dakota were a bullish influence together with suggestions of possible big purchases of wheat by the United States government as a substitute for silver legislation. Opening unchanged to 3/8 higher, July 75 3/4-76 1/8, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started 1/8-5/8 up, and subsequently climbed further.

WHEAT CRASH REGARDED AS SIGNIFICANT

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, April 21.—The crack in the wheat market is important. It is likely to mark a crack in the New Deal. It may cause either a break in the confidence of the country in price-lifting schemes, nationalistic policies, etc.; or it may drive the administration to move extreme policies.

May wheat has fallen to within about 4 paper cents of a year ago. During the life of this option it has been up to $1.28 in paper. The low was 71½ cents. Thursday it touched 72½ cents.

Measured in gold, wheat is below 45 cents a bushel!

Of course, the cheif trouble is too much wheat and restrictions on trading it. A large carryover and a larger winter wheat crop in prospect, coupled with practically no exports at our artificial price level are ample explanation. Cotton and silver are other commodities which have weakened for similar reasons.

Another trouble is the instability of paper money and the uncertainties of what the next inflation move will be.

ISSUE NOW ACUTE

The break in wheat makes the issue acute. Politically, something will have to be done about it. We can either try more inflation, or allow things to take their course under the law of supply and demand.

If the administration takes the former course, it will do one of two things: Either (1) it will reduce the size of the dollar, in the sense of cutting the purchasing power of our money; or (2) it will increase the size of the bushel basket, thus increasing the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat.

Either procedure would be equally effective. If the dollar is cut, the wheat farmer will get more dollars, but each dollar will buy less. If the bushel is made bigger, he will get more dollars per bushel, but he will have fewer bushels.

If we go back to a definite monetary standard and quit fighting the law of supply and demand, it will be, as Secretary Wallace said, inevitable that "sooner or later Chicago and Liverpool wheat prices would work closer together." That would mean lower prices.

FUTURE UNCERTAIN

What will actually be done remains uncertain. But undoubtedly the administration will "do something." Evidently foreigners judge that a further depreciation of the dollar will be the outcome. At least they sold dollars, and the dollar fell in foreign exchange to a point where some began to talk of the possibility of gold exports.

It is strange to find the President objecting to silver inflation on the ground that it would disturb his schemes for trades with foreign countries. Where are his nationalistic policies? Who broke up the London Conference by maintaining that our monetary manipulations were our own business?

Just now, however, it seems that the demand for silver "remonetization" has become so strong that he will accept a permissive bill, just as he accepted the Thomas inflation amendments.

Incidentally, we note that those amendments have mostly been used—open market operation, dollar devaluation and acceptance of silver payments on foreign debts.

As to Senator Thomas' talk of "controlled inflation," we should note the controls he proposes. They are: Silver notes will not be issued "when silver purchases have been made to the extent thought to be necessary."

What that limit may be is suggested by the Senator when he says the purpose is to "permit the people to secure money with which to pay their taxes, their interest and their debts!"

One little question is: How is he going to give the silver certificates to "the people?"

Another one is: If prices are boosted, will the people not need more and more silver certificates?

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER L.

At noon Saturday, Pippin called for Kathleen. They were having lunch together. Kathleen wasn't ready. She was in an evil temper. She pulled her dress irritably over her head.

"Everything went wrong in this house today. The morning paper didn't come, dad couldn't find his glasses, Janice phoned to say Bobby severed an artery in his hand and mother's in bed."

"Is she very sick? Can I see her?"

"I think she's sleeping now. But you can see how she's failed in the last month. It's swell for her to have her beloved oldest son picking a wife like Sonia. Of course she won't say anything, and I've got to be gracious. They were here to dinner last night. She grows worse the more you know her. I was telling about the Art Exhibit at the Legion of Honor. I happened to mention Michel Angelo, and she says, 'Who is he?' It's unbelievable. I could wish the world would end—anything so the wedding never comes off. Well, come on. I promised to pack Kevin's suitcase."

"Where is he going?"

"Oh—down the line. The Carews are giving a house party. For reasons unknown to sanity, Jane is determined to throw herself at Kevin."

Trying to Get Kevin

The suitcase was nearly packed. Kathleen took a paper on which she made a memorandum, and checked off the list.

"Well, I guess that's all." She snapped the grip closed and buckled the straps.

"Aren't women the fools? Wouldn't you think a girl like Jane Carew with money and good looks would have sense enough to pick out a man who would make her happy?"

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, don't be dumb. She's doing everything on earth to get Kevin. Ringing him up and inviting him to dinner." Kathleen picked up a box and opened it. "There's what she sent him for his birthday."

It was a very exquisite green-gold cigaret case, very thin and with a cunning lighter included in the mechanism.

"You'd think she'd know he would only make her miserable for life."

"Why would Kevin make her miserable?"

"Well, it's no day-dream to be a doctor's wife—not the kind of doctor Kevin's going to be, anyway. His work will always be his greatest passion. Jane isn't the type to play second fiddle to that kind of rival. She would just love being left alone five nights out of seven. When this hospital is finished it will probably be seven nights out of seven. It's odd, isn't it, that women seem to like the men who ignore and neglect them? Lew Frazier is mad for Jane. He's wealthy, a good polo player and just the type of play boy she should marry. Why should she want a poor doctor who thinks he's rich if he can pay his bills, and who can't dare to get married for years yet?"

Mills in Bankruptcy

Said Pippin, above the confusion and ache of her thoughts: "Kevin has money of his own."

Kathleen gave her a blank look. Then her face cleared. "Oh, didn't you hear? The lumber mills that his father started in the Northwest and that have kept Kevin all his life closed down in the beginning of the year. They've gone into bankruptcy. He has his salary and nothing but. He certainly can't marry on that; naturally he wouldn't let a rich girl support him."

"He must be interested or he wouldn't go all the way down the country just to see her!"

"They have a grand place, a big swimming pool, tennis courts, and interesting people. You don't have to be in love with a girl to enjoy that. Besides, the Carews are very old friends of his. I guess he does like Jane."

Thoughts flew through Pippin's troubled mind. She had no right to be shaking, indignant, furious. After all, Kevin was young. He worked very hard. He had a right to a little variety. Furthermore, she went out with Gregg and half a dozen other boys at college. He wouldn't dream of protesting.

Mary came into the room. Her dark, intelligent face with its rich eyes, had grown heavy. Her hair was streaked with gray; there were deep lines about her mouth; her chin had thickened. But Pippin loved her. She thought Mary had a deep spiritual beauty.

Kathleen turned on her mother. "Why did you get up, mother? Pippin and I don't have to go down town. Besides Ada can attend to things."

Said Mary, picking nervously at the cuticle of her thumb: "I feel very well. I want you to go down and select the silver for Edward."

"It's silly, mother, to give them silver. You know Edward hasn't much money; Sonia will probably have him eating in the kitchen off oilcloth. It's a foolish, ironic gesture to give them a solid silver table service."

"I know, but I asked Edward; he said Sonia wanted the silver."

Mary walked around the room, propping up the pillows on the couch, straightening a picture on the wall, picking a thread from the carpet. She finally paused at Kevin's chiffonier and gazed at the picture of Hildegarde which Kathleen had stuck there the day of his homecoming, and which he had never bothered to remove.

Mary said absently, as though unaware her lips were uttering the sounds: "She seems to be a sweet girl."

"Who?"

"Hildegarde."

They both looked at her in astonishment.

Kathleen flamed: "Mother! You're not wishing that on us!"

Mary continued in that dream-like tone: "She writes very often. Everyone has a right to his own life."

At lunch, both were preoccupied. Kathleen kept her eyes on her plate.

Mary's Actions Weird

She said in a husky, trembling tone: "Mother acted weird—she looks awful. Edward is the most irritable person in the world, since this thing happened. He thinks we're all against him. He's doing the magnificent thing—throwing his life away for a cheap thing like Sonia; we're his enemies because we don't give him a big hand and yell 'cheerio.' But he's just the high-minded type of fool that would think he could make a madonna out of any woman."

"All I hope is that Kevin remains selfish and a self-seeker. They're the wisest type."

"Does Hidegrade write often?"

"Three or four letters a week. She also sent a large picture of herself inscribed in German: 'Think back to our love—always yours.' He stuck it under the shirts in his chiffonier drawer. When I was putting away the laundry last Saturday, I found it there. Oh, well—let them mess up their lives! What's it to us!"

Pippin went to her father's office. She walked into her little cubby hole and sat on a stool. She knew she wouldn't see Kevin. He was away this afternoon. She didn't wish to see him.

She felt cold and forlorn and wished she could let go and weep.

It didn't matter about the house-party—not so much. But she drew a little shutter down in her mind. Behind it was Hildegarde, whom Kevin had loved and who still loved him. She wouldn't think about this. She grew furious and ashamed thinking of it.

Bill Arrives

Suddenly she felt him standing beside her; felt his hands wandering over her face. When this image crystallized, the world was obliterated. He had never looked so at another! He had not held another in this tender, beautiful embrace!

"I'm crazy," she thought suddenly. "I'm an utter fool!"

The very idea of stressing in this absurd fashion a momentary ardor. She was annoyed and very arbitrary with Gregg when he became serious; Bill's fervent young protests she dismissed with a sigh—then why all this extravagant emotion because Kevin found her attractive?

She sat there steeling herself against him; she wouldn't think about him.

Suddenly she remembered that she had kept this Saturday night free; Gregg had begged for it but she had saved it for Kevin. He hadn't wanted it.

She reached over and opened her books, staring fixedly at the page. She heard a footstep—a quick, elastic step.

She didn't turn but her face flushed and every pulse went racing. Someone stepped into the room.

"Pippin—hello Pippin!"

Almost before she could gather herself; almost before she recognized the blond, attractive stranger, Bill caught her in his arms. Bill kissed her and held her and laughed with joy against her face.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Never tamper with a mole. The application of a strong acid is dangerous, likely to create a scar. These dark beauty spots can be removed but only by and on the advice of a competent skin specialist. Only the trained eye is able to distinguish harmless moles from the kind that may develop into a malignant growth.

An effective face trim for the girl with copper colored hair, gray eyes and ivory skin is an eye shadow of blue green. It brings out the glints of her glory crest, gives character and luster to the eyes. Of all cosmetic props, eye shadows call for the most discrimination in choice of color, exactness and delicacy of application. There's a chance always of looking messy.

CORRUPT POLITICIANS DEBASE, INVENTORS ELEVATE HUMANITY

The closing years of President Grant's disappointing administration, when the tide of corruption was high in public and business life, coincide with the invention of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell, and independently also by E. Gray, making possible the transmission of speech and sound by wire. A year later, Thomas Alva Edison started experiments with electric incandescence of carbonized paper leading to the practical electric incandescent lamp (1879) which gave not only a safe, convenient and economic illumination but was the first step toward the electronic tube of today, without which radio, amplifying, talking picture, electric eye and other marvels of electricity could not have been developed. MANUFACTURE OF CALCIUM CYANAMID

Calcium cyanamid (CaCN2), a fertilizer, is produced by heating calcium carbide (CaC2) in presence of nitrogen. CaC2, obtained from coke and limestone in the electric furnace, is put in perforated cans into an oven, where pure nitrogen is circulated. The carbide is heated electrically to above 1,100° C. by carbon rods that run through the carbide in the cans. Reaction: CaC2+N2= CaCN2+C. The product is about 60% pure, the rest is lime and carbon. Ground, moistened (to slake the lime) and dried, it is ready for shipping as fertilizer. With steam, it is decomposed, giving calcium carbonate and ammonia: CaCN2+3H2O= CaCO3+2NH3 (ammonia).

This is one process of fixation of nitrogen, for which the United States nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals are equipped, having a rated annual capacity of 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen. (Chemistry)

"FRANCE IS TRANQUIL"—EMPEROR NAPOLEON III

Elected president of the Second French Republic, 1848, Louis Napoleon marshaled a coup d'etat in 1851, having opponents arrested, threatening revolt ruthlessly suppressed by force of bayonets and republicans exiled by the thousands. He forced the "popular vote" making him hereditary Emperor Napoleon III. Ambitious Empress Eugenie, a motive power, is shown with court ladies. Above cartoon illustrates in the true light the emperor's favorite phrase. The Second French Republic became the Second French Empire.

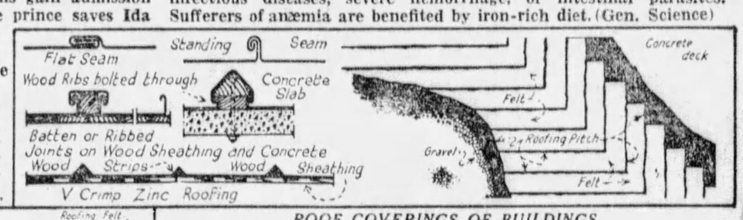
RED BLOOD CELLS IN HEALTH AND DISEASE

Normally about 5,000,000 red blood cells are in 1 cu. mm. blood of men and 4,500,000 in that of women. The number increases under conditions of oxygen want, such as life at high altitude or in diseases in which circulation is slow. Decrease of number of red cells occurs in case of abnormal destruction or inadequate production. Normal blood contains about 14% haemoglobin; the percentage in comparison to the normal is determined by matching it with standard color comparators, normal blood taken as 100%.

Above: Red cells, normal, chlorotic (deficient in haemoglobin) and in pernicious anaemia (number reduced, cells enlarged, degenerated). The cause of this mostly fatal infliction may be chronic infectious diseases, severe hemorrhage, or intestinal parasites. Sufferers of anaemia are benefited by iron-rich diet. (Gen. Science)



ROOF COVERINGS OF BUILDINGS

Most generally used roof coverings: 1, Shingles (of wood, felt saturated with asphalt, asbestos fiber and portland cement, galvanized steel, copper, lead). 2, Slates (split natural rock). 3, Tile, (burned clay or cement.) All these are nailed to wood sheathing or strips. 4, Sheet metal placed over felt on wood sheathing. 5, Composition (layers of overlapping saturated felt cemented together with asphalt or tar pitch; top surface covered with gravel). The Conciliator at Play

That commissioner of conciliation ain't a bad idea. He works for the Department of Labor. But we can use him any place on the map where there's room to jab a pin.

The conciliator smooths chaos down to disorder and then irons disorder out to serenity. He listens to both sides of the argument.

After listening to both sides of the argument he stretches his own conclusions. Then he makes an unbiased decision. And listens to both sides of the argument again.

Department stores have had conciliators for many years. When a disgustiated lady complains about a saleslady being snirpy to her in walks the conciliator. He taps the saleswoman on the shoulder, slaps the indignant patron on the back and smacks himself in the face.

The saleswoman is told to put on her hat and coat. The patron marches out with full honors of war. The saleswoman takes off her hat and coat and goes back to work. If it pleases a shopper to see a clerklady fired the conciliator will fire her 15 or 20 times a day.

That's conciliation of the very finest material. The customer is always right until he pays his bill. We have tried it with traffic policemen with very evaporated results. A committee on conciliation in the rumble seat should never enter into discussions of green lights and mileage.

Especially when the vehicle gendarme is writing something in a little book. Traiffc cops keep the funniest diaries in the world. After writing the interesting events of the day they tear out the page and hand it to you. And so to bat.

A conciliator in a family argument usually gets the worst of the bungalow debate. They crack down on him with the parlor lamp, wrap the stove around his neck, wire him for sound and sprinkle him with star dust just to make the jonquils grow. Strange how wild swingers suddenly become sharpshooters when a conciliator drives up on foot.

Head waiters, hotel managers and house detectives are all conciliators. They combine suavity, courtesy and service with politeness, regrets and substitutes. You can't stay in any business long if you haven't got an educated slicker around to comb your clients' hair and massage their grouches.

Now, a conciliator ain't a good insurance risk. But he gets a good salary and all hospital expenses paid. The nicest thing about his work is the convalescence in the solarium.

WHY PITTSBURGH IS GREAT
Its Many Civic Organizations Promote Pittsburgh's Progress

The Poster Nuisance

Candidates Who Violate the Law Against Signs Deserve No Votes.

Notwithstanding that it is unlawful to erect signs on public property, or on private property without the owners' consent; notwithstanding that the Civic Club has appealed to the candidates individually not to deface trees, poles and walls with their posters; notwithstanding that the newspapers have warned against the practice, some of the aspirants for public office who ask the citizens to vote for them in the primary election next month just can't resist the temptation thus to advertise themselves.

But it may be that this illegal advertising, this vandalism, will have a different effect from what the offending candidates intend and expect it to have. It may be that the voters will be repelled from, rather than attracted to candidates who show so little consideration for the rights of the public as to mar public property with their signs. Certainly they deserve no votes.

With the election less than a month distant there is surprisingly little popular interest. Many persons who ordinarily know long in advance of the voting how they intend to vote have not yet reached a decision in the present campaign. But they should not let their apathy deter them from registering. This is the second of the three registration days in Pittsburgh. Enroll today, if you are not already on the election lists.

University of Pittsburgh students have drawn up a program for revision of the State Constitution. They make some good suggestions. Especially desirable is the proposed abolition of our present system of justices of the peace and aldermen. "J. P." has come to mean "justice for the plaintiff." The system is a relic of oxcart days, and should be changed, along with many other things pertaining to local government which are not fitted to the automobile age.

School districts, second class townships, and counties should be consolidated in the interest of economy and efficiency. It is wasteful to maintain a separate county government for every tract of territory that can be crossed in any direction by an automobile in two hours or less. The people of Pennsylvania would be saved many hundreds of thousands or dollars in taxes annually if they would get rid of unnecessary administrative units and the hordes of political parasites that go with them.

To get rid of oxcart government in Pennsylvania it will be necessary to revise the constitution, and such extensive revision will be necessary that the process of having the Legislature pass amendments and submit them to the people will not suffice. A constitutional convention should be called and a new constitution written. Candidates for the Legislature should be required to tell what their attitude is on this proposal.

It is a pleasure to find the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce displaying a lively interest in plans for a transcontinental highway. The Sun-Telegraph and the other Hearst papers have been urging for years that first-class roads should be constructed from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In placing plans for a transcontinental highway before the Public Works Administration for consideration as a federal government project, the Chamber of Commerce is indorsing a proposal of the Hearst newspapers.

The Chamber of Commerce is addressing itself to another worth-while project in undertaking to fortify Pittsburgh's position as a supplier of materials to the automobile industry. There are those who think that if Pittsburgh had been sufficiently alert 25 or 30 years ago it might have gained for itself the great auto factories that have been established in Detroit. However that may be, the city has benefited and will continue to benefit as the source from which much of the steel and accessories used in automobiles are derived.

Charles E. Wilson, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, declared at a joint luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce and the Society of Automotive Engineers that if Pittsburgh wishes to increase its importance in the automobile industry it must make full use of its laboratories and technical schools, as engineering and research have been and are the most potent factors in the development of the motor business.

Mr. Wilson's remarks echo those of Dr. E. R. Weidlein, director of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, who says in the Institute's twenty-first annual report that "science, applied to manufacturing and merchandising through industrial research, continues to be the sovereign solvent of their problems." The Mellon Institute has conducted many investigations of interest to the automobile industry—the safety glass investigation, for example.

One of the most interesting items in Dr. Weidlein's report is the statement that studies in the treatment of pneumonia and allied pulmonary diseases "have resulted in the production of an apparently effectual anti-pneumococcus serum." The Mellon Institute is also attacking the pneumonia problem in its investigation of industrial pollution of the air, which is believed to bear some relationship to the prevalence of the disease.

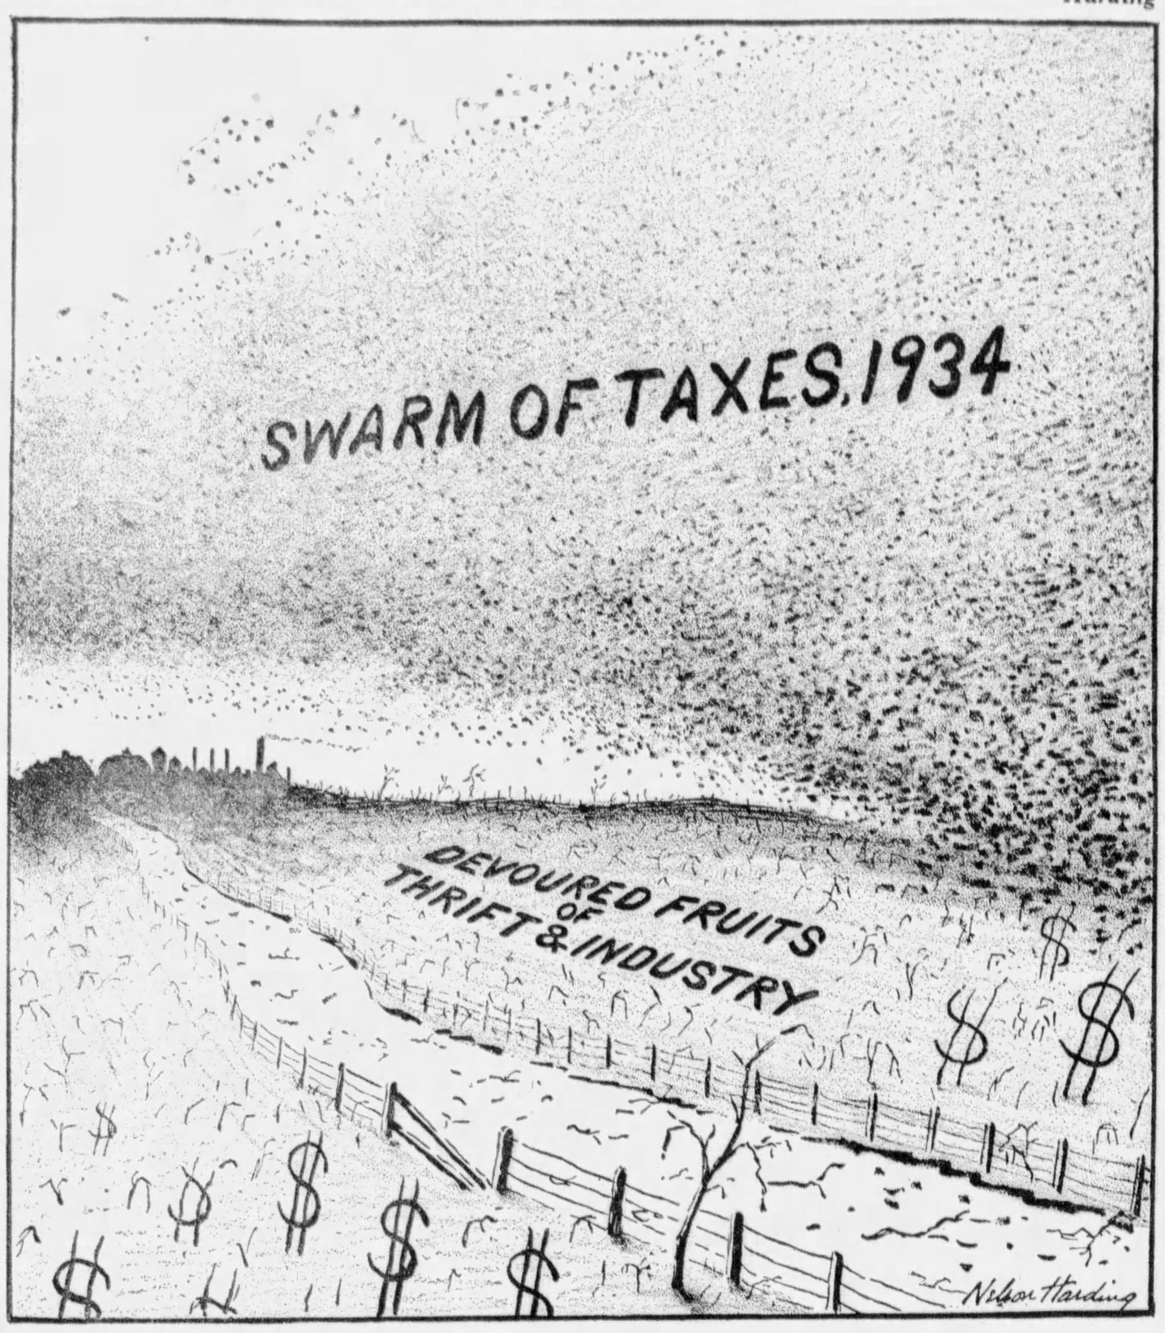
If the "apparently effectual anti-pneumococcus serum" mentioned in the Mellon Institute's report fulfills the expectations which this brief announcement raises, it is to be hoped no time will be lost in making the serum available to the people; for pneumonia is one of our worst disease scourges, and Pittsburgh has a much higher death rate from it than most cities.

Apropos of making medicine available, it is grati- fying to learn from Lester H. Perry, executive secretary of the Allegheny County Medical Society, that the difficulty and delay experienced in getting prescriptions filled for persons on the public relief list are not due to any failure on the part of the retail drug outlets but to faulty administrative procedure. This is the finding of a committee of the Medical Society which investigated the charges. Steps have been taken to correct the procedure.

A startling discovery made by Prof. Leo Frobe- nius, the famous German archeologist, in Southern Rhodesia, Africa, forms the subject of a beautifully illustrated article in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Prof. Frobenius found ancient drawings of a mysterious race that lived 10,000 years before Tutankhamen.

Uncle Everett has found a clue to the whereabouts of Uncle. The trail is getting hot. You will find the story in pictures in "Toots and Casper," one of Jimmy Murphy's series in the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Many of the most popular funnies are to be found there.

'The Year of the Locusts' -:- -:- By Nelson Harding



The sky is darkened by the swarm
That sweeps unchecked across the land,
Destroying all within its path,
Devouring on every hand

The fruits of Toil and Industry,
Incentive, Thrift and Enterprise.
And in the Plague's wide-spreading wake
The land, all devastated, lies.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 21. — I popped in on a gentleman who had not arisen the other morning. He was luxuriating in most magnificent splendor. Although he's not especially extravagant. His enormous bed with a dove gray canopy was the quintessence of silk, satin and fineries.

The lighting was indirect, a handy book shelf within easy reach of his pillow, also a telephone, humidor and swinging patented lighter. Inset in the foot of the bed a clock with phosphorescent hands. Too, a swing-around stand like dentists use with a thermos jug of water, pads, pencils and house push buttons.

He wore a monogrammed slumber suit of golden brown with robe and slippers the green of St. Elmo's fire racked near by. Departing, I thought how one-third of life is spent in bed yet most of us regard sleep as a haphazard interlude and make no effort to achieve comfort attaining it.

Don Herold does all his work in bed, breakfasting there and not dressing until he has turned out his daily quota of writing and drawing. Long ago he became washed up with exercise. Mark Twain was another humorist whose entire literary output came from his pillows.

I am of the wandering and wondering instead of the prying sort. That is why I like to laze on a bench in Battery Park facing the twinkling harbor, watching the pert tugs, ferries, Coney side-wheelers, tramps and giant leviathans churning a grand crescendo. Measured by esthetics not a beautiful spot in itself but the air is tangy and affectionate and the clouds fluffily tinted and egg-beaten white. An admirable setting to weave rainbows of wistful fancy.

York, England, has been the generating ground for innumerable fine British actors. An entire imported company playing on Broadway in "The Shining Hour" came from there originally. The area has flowered the best in diction. But they have much to practice on. One of the streets of the town is Whipmawwhopmagate.

I swung, or rather sauntered, into East Fifty-second street yesterday afternoon in time to see an asthmatic Gay '90 pug dog beribboned in pink trotting along on a leash. Somehow I expected it to be in tow of a C. D. Gibson girl in shirt waist, white piquet skirt and sailor hat. Instead it was piloted by a young modern in slacks, sandals, polo shirt, perky saucer-sized hat who burnt her cigaret in ankle deep whiffs. My pooch barked at both furiously. And John D. Rockefeller, Jr., turned to gaze.

Gene Tunney is leading the sheltered life in his Connecticut domain off the main road an hour from town. Never a gadabout, in his hey-dey he was nevertheless seen at an occasional tea or a first night of the Lunts. But nothing now lures him from cloister. He likes to walk through his acres with his police dog, chop wood and spend much time among his books, which personally selected, are said by the bibliophiles to express surprising literary tastes. Many say his long talks with George Bernard Shaw on Brione, the island of his honeymooning, had much to do with his typical life of the English countryside.

Reporters such as Lindsay Denison do not come with every generation. There is always a skip or so. He ran with the pack that included O'Malley, Cobb, Ed Hill, Karl Kitchen, Swope and Martin Green. Lamentable but true, there are no New York reporters like them these days. Denison was a reportorial gyroscope, the swifter he spun the steadier he was. A Yale man and dude of the campus, his newspaper career was noted for his sloppy dressing. The only thing that interested him was scent of the story and the baying that followed behind, for "Denny" was usually out front. He is among the few men the waspish city editor Charles Chapin never rebuked. For Denison was sensitive and Chapin needed him.

There are people I've never seen I'd like to see just to see how nearly my mental pictures correspond. Off hand, I think of William McFee, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Augustus Thomas, Gatti Cazzazi, Dashiel Hammett and Faith Baldwin. With one exception my mind snap-shots have been extraordinarily accurate. A notable failure was my size-up of Chevalier. I saw him mentally as dapper, foppish, with a twist of capsule mustache. This when he was an idol of the Paris boulevards, unknown to America. It was a surprise to find a pigeon-toed, farmerish looking fellow who might have been yanked from the south end of a north bound plow.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Are you letting yourself slip sartorially?

Are you careless about the way you knot your tie?

Do you wear it in a wrinkled condition instead of having it pressed?

Are your trousers too short because they are out of shape?

Are you careless about having your shoes shined?

You used to shave every day but now you cut your beard every other day.

Do you wear your linen until it is badly soiled?

A reduced income is no excuse for appearing slovenly.

The little things enumerated are services that you can do for yourself without any expense.

Your negligent appearance shows that you are losing respect for yourself.

If the type of your employment prohibits your being neatly dressed there is an excuse; otherwise there is none.

If you would keep yourself looking as well as your financial and workaday position will permit, you would be surprised what a difference it would make to your self-respect.

ISN'T IT SO?

Distance is often responsible for lasting friendship.

Many a woman finds that making light of her avoirdupoise is a weighty problem.

It's all right to blow your own horn if it's not done with a saxophone in a quiet neighborhood.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

What's the Difference Between a Stenographer and A Secretary?

What's the matter with most business women? Why do so few achieve real records while the rest stay in the mob?

IS IT BECAUSE "THEY'RE JUST WOMEN"? ARE WOMEN NATURALLY INFERIOR IN INTELLIGENCE AND INITIATIVE?

To the contrary, surveys show that girls are usually for brighter than boys, that women are frequently shrewder than men.

Not stupid. THEN ARE THEY LAZY?

No; again the girls get honors. The average woman will work circles around a man—will stick at her job where a man will soldier on his. And YET, year after year, she stays on that one spot, doing the same chores, without an added nickle.

Not sutpid; not lazy. THEN IS IT, PERHAPS, BECAUSE "WOMEN WERE MADE FOR MARRIAGE"?

Even so, wives have jobs nowadays, as well as homes. A girl goes to work after leaving school as naturally, as inevitably, as a boy. Nor does her job interfere with a possible romance. Instead, it is a great aid to romance. For a girl meets far more men while working than she could at home; has more freedom and fun, more pretty clothes.

And, having married, the working wife can make life much more pleasant and profitable for herself and her husband than the purely domestic one. Indeed, most wives frankly prefer business work to house work. So, obviously, love isn't gumming up the feminine industrial machinery.

WHAT IS?

Plainly, something. For 999 women out of 1,000 are practically where they started, for five, 10 or 15 years after they take their first jobs. They know their way around better. They dress more charmingly, have a smarter "line," and may have had small raises and promotions. But most of them are still puttering at the same old chore.

AND—WHAT'S WORSE—THEY'RE CONTENT TO PUTTER!

Of course, they'd like more money. Lots more money; Money to spend on themselves, or their homes. They'd also like more authority. They'd "get a kick out of putting it over on the other girls."

BUT FOR THE JOB ITSELF—FOR THE CHALLENGE AND ADVENTURE, THE PRIDE AND POWER INVOLVED IN BIGGER JOBS—THE AVERAGE WOMAN DOESN'T GIVE A HOOT. Never even thinks of it in those terms. Is never touched by that curiosity and excitement which men—even the laziest, silliest and most stupid men—feel about jobs.

Why should she feel these things? If she works hard, carefully, faithfully, doing what she is told—doing it eagerly, giving generously of her time—shouldn't that be enough? Shouldn't that, naturally, result in raises and promotions? She thinks it should—AND SHE'S MAD WHEN IT DOESN'T.

She's mad, and sorry for herself. She thinks the world is "unfair to women: that men get all the breaks." She views with suspicion the women who are promoted over her. There's "something funny — something M-I-G-H-T-Y funny, Mabel!"

But is there? Is the male world really ganging the woman worker? Or is there something in the average woman worker, herself, which prevents her progress? What's the answer?

Ray W. Sherman touches the answer in his grand little book, "IF YOU WANT TO GET AHEAD," Little, Brown and Company, publishers.

Get that book! Whether you're a man of a woman worker, or just a dreaming youngster, get that book. Think about it—try it on YOURSELF.

Why do most working women remain business ciphers? Here's Mr. Sherman's answer:

"A man may dictate 10 letters and one telegram. A 'stenographer' will write and send them in the order dictated. A 'secretary' will write, submit and send the telegram before she touches a single letter. 'Secretaries' are worth two, three four and five times as much money as 'stenographers.'

"THE 'SECRETARY' USES HER HEAD. SHE THINKS. SHE GETS A PICTURE OF THINGS AS THE BOSS SEES THEM, AND MAKES HERSELF A USEFUL PART OF THE MACHINERY. THE 'STENOGRAPHER' GETS NO SUCH PICTURE. SHE NEVER BOTHERS TO THINK ABOUT WHAT KIND OF AN EMPLOYE IS WORTH MOST TO THE BOSS, AND SHE NEVER CHANGES HERSELF.

Given the same start, the same job, the same mental equipment, 999 women out of 1,000 do what they're told to do, work hard, faithfully, conscientiously — AND STAY PUT.

The 1,000th girl THINKS; USES HER IMAGINATION; REACHES BEYOND OFFICE ROUTINE INTO THE ADVENTURE OF THE WORK; MAKES HERSELF PART OF THAT ADVENTURE—AND GOES AHEAD!

So what? Just how does that apply to YOU?

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

This Restless Afternoon

I fidgeted each moment through,
This restless afternoon;
A dozen tasks I set to do
And finished all too soon.

I read a story, penned a note,
Then polished candlesticks;
I pinned a white rose at my throat
And tried some new card tricks.

But slowly ticked the stubborn clock,
While minutes lagged along;
My eagerness each seemed to mock
With time's most tedious song.

I fretted while the seconds went
From one o'clock till four,
Then, suddenly conferred content,
Your footfall at my door!

Roger Babson, the Business Statistician, a Good Predicter, Sees Improvement on the Way

By Edwin C. Hill

ROGER WARD BABSON strokes his gray goatee and opines that things are looking up for a fact in these more or less United States. He's a pretty good predicter, is the astute Mr. Babson. On a number of occasions when most economists went haywire, Roger Babson saw or guessed what was coming. Thirty-five of his fifty-seven years have been spent in gathering and analyzing statistics of business, and teaching two hundred students in the Babson Institute at Wellesley, Massachusetts.

For all of his twelve thousand Florida acres, Mr. Babson is a rock-ribbed New England Yankee. He has never borrowed a dollar in his life and he has no love for Wall street. Born in the old fishing town of Gloucester, and graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he went to work in his father's bank. Then statistics gripped him, and from his study of figures he became the Delphic oracle of business. In his bearded, early days he looked like a doctor. Now he has the cut of a Kentucky colonel.

* * *

He Predicted The Depression

IT'S in the record that, in 1926, he said that a distinct business recession, and probably a panic, could be looked for within three years. In 1929 he followed that up with the sharp warning that the collapse was imminent. Wall street hooted in derision. Financial editors penned paragraphs of ridicule. Criticism and abuse was poured upon his head. A few weeks later, the Babson panic arrived promptly on schedule, but Babson, offended at the rebuff his well-intended warnings had received, said that hereafter, when he had any talking to do, he would do it to his horse.

The reporters must have overheard his latest chat with Dobbin, for Babson is quoted as saying that the recipe for prosperity is "work harder and think harder." He knows 70 ways in which anybody can make a million dollars. Here are three of the ways: Invent a gearless automobile. Produce self-finding golf balls. Invent a fountain pen which will write in three different colors.

The Greatest One-Woman Show

THE curtain rises slowly in a New York theater. The stage is bare, except for a table, sofa, a groundcloth and a curtain. A woman in her early forties, taller than the average, with jet-black lustrous hair and magnificent dark eyes—magnetic eyes—steps from the wings. While a packed house sits entranced, she enacts little dramas—alone, single-handed, with no assistant or assistance except the magic of her genius.

Before your eyes she transforms herself into a southern belle, an Irish peasant, an Italian beggar or a Scotch immigrant, marvelously and to the life. Without any question, this enigmatic and mysterious lady is the greatest one-woman show in the world. In the general eclipse of the spoken drama, with the stage fallen on lean days, and scarcely more than four successful theatrical productions in New York, this remarkable player, who is her own author, stage director, manager and cast, fills her theater at $10,000 a week, with people storming vainly at the doors. She is Ruth Draper.

Her grandfather was Charles A. Dana, of the New York Sun. Her father was William Draper, a physician. She played a small part which failed, went to France to entertain the A. E. F., thrilled and delighted the Army camps and went to London to score her first great success. Shrewd and discerning critics like Ward Morehouse, call her the greatest actress in the world—greater than Garbo or Katherine Cornell—greater than Ada Rehan and Mrs. Fiske and Sarah Bernhardt of the past.

Honors have been showered upon her gifted head. The Pope received her at the Vatican. She is the only actress who was ever presented at the Court of St. James. Every continental capital knows the thrill of her superlative artistry. Her complete equipment consists of the table, the chair, the sofa, the ground-cloth and a curtain.

In a flash, she puts before your eyes a Ukrainian peasant, a Norwegian girl, an Arabian lady of the harem, a shrewd gum-chewing telephone girl, and builds around every central character a rippling, flashing accompaniment of vivid life. Scorning publicity, she has never been interviewed. From the stage she retires behind the veil of impenetrable seclusion and mystery. How she achieves her amazing effects, no man knows. Probably with those amazing eyes—those strange and glowing mesmeric eyes.

Our 'Dual' Air Force

By James T. Williams, Jr.

RECENT letters from far and near have brought many inquiries regarding American aviation in general and military aviation in particular. It is not possible in one day to answer all of these questions from readers interested in seeing America supreme in the air. But at least a beginning can be made.

An Atlanta reader inquires:

"I see that Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, read into the Congressional Record the other day a speech delivered before an organization of internationalists in which the speaker said the United States is the only country in the world which has not a separate air corps. Why is this so?"

The answer is that it is not so and Senator Robinson could have easily found out the error had he taken the time to look up the facts.

As a matter of fact three nations have a separate department of aviation and 14 nations place their aviation either under the army or under the navy or both.

Take for example the great powers. The record shows that Great Britain, France and Italy have a separate ministry for the air and the reason for that is to be found in the peculiar defense of those countries.

* * *

Russia Follows Different Policy

RUSSIA resorts to a different organization of her aviation. There is a subordinate agency in charge of technical matters pertaining to aviation, but its tactical use and training are under the Russian army and the Russian navy.

Japan and the United States, as the records show, have developed a system under which there is a distinctive aviation for the army and a distinctive aviation for the navy. There is a reason for this which any American can ascertain by making an analysis of the defense problems of Japan and the United States.

A comparison between the geographical characteristics of Japan and the United States on the one side and Great Britain, France and Italy on the other shows that the nations with more or less limited homelands to defend and having dense populations living close to other nations similarly situated, with their vital areas very close to the airdromes of their powerful neighbors, have adopted one system.

Those nations which are distant from powerful nations, so distant, in fact, as to make a sudden attack from the air in force far less probable, have adopted another system.

This is why neither Japan nor the United States has followed the example of certain European countries living side by side. Japan has not divorced her aviation from the army and navy for good military reasons. Japan builds her army and navy and organizes her aviation on the advice of the ablest military and naval authorities Japan can produce. And these authorities are trusted and followed by the Japanese government and by the Japanese people. All Japan would laugh at the proposal that they should imitate Great Britain. France or Italy in the matter of aviation organization when the Japanese general staff recommends, after careful study, a system better suited to the defense of Japan.

* * *

Committee Will Answer Questions

A FURTHER examination of the record will reveal to the Atlanta correspondent, who was kind enough to make the inquiry to which this reply is addressed, that at least two of the European nations which have a separate ministry for air are fully aware that aviation units would have to be placed under complete control of the army and navy commanders as soon as the threat of serious air attack on their vital areas had been overcome.

These two nations have therefore prepared themselves to come to the Japanese-American system of distinctive aviation for the navy as soon as the danger of a serious air attack from one of their powerful next door neighbors no longer threatened.

Fortunately the above and many other questions concerning our military aviation will be answered by competent authority when the fact finding committee, headed by Newton D. Baker, President Wilson's Secretary of War, has completed its study of that subject. This search for the truth has just been started, thanks to the initiative of President Roosevelt's fairminded and highminded Secretary of War, former Gov. Dern of Utah. With the support of the President the Secretary of War has launched an inquiry that will protect the American people in the immediate future from alien falsehoods and domestic ballyhoo about American military aviation.
